THE BUDGET DOCUMENTS

Budget of the United States Government, 1987 contains the Budget Message of the President and presents an overview of the President's budget proposals. It includes explanations of spending programs in terms of national needs, agency missions, and basic programs, and an analysis of receipts, including a discussion of the President's tax program. This document also contains a description of the budget system and various summary tables on the budget as a whole.

United States Budget in Brief, 1987 is designed for use by the general public. It provides a more concise, less technical overview of the 1987 Budget than the above volume. Summary and historical tables on the Federal budget and debt are also provided, together with graphic displays.

Budget of the United States Government, 1987—Appendix contains detailed information on the various appropriations and funds that comprise the budget. The Appendix contains more detailed information than any of the other budget documents. It includes for each agency: the proposed text of appropriation language, budget schedules for each account, new legislative proposals, explanations of the work to be performed and the funds needed, proposed general provisions applicable to the appropriations of entire agencies or groups of agencies, and schedules of permanent positions. Supplementals and rescission proposals for the current year are presented separately. Information is also provided on certain activities whose outlays are not part of the budget-totals.

Special Analyses, Budget of the United States Government, 1987 contains analyses that are designed to highlight specified program areas or provide other significant presentations of Federal budget data. This document includes information about: alternative views of the budget, i.e., current services and national income accounts; economic and financial analyses of the budget covering Government finances and operations as a whole; and Government-wide program and financial information for Federal civil rights and research and development programs.

Historical Tables, Budget of the United States Government, 1987 provides data on receipts, outlays, surpluses or deficits, and Federal debt covering extended time periods—in many cases from 1940-1991. These are much longer time periods than those covered by similar tables in other budget documents. The data have been restructured to be consistent with the concepts and presentation used in the 1987 Budget, so these data series are comparable over time.

Management of the United States Government, 1987 provides a description of efforts to improve the management of Federal agencies. It reports on the President's Council on Integrity and Efficiency, describes Reform '88 initiatives undertaken by the President's Council on Management Improvement, and outlines the Administration's management proposals. Mangement improvement themes covered in the report include privatization, productivity improvement, return of responsibilities to State and local governments, administrative streamlining, program delivery improvements, cost reductions, cash and credit management, payment integrity efforts, upgraded information technology systems, and increased use of user fees and contracting out. Special sections describe current procurement reforms, the status of Grace Commission recommendations, and implementation of the Debt Collection Act of 1982, the Prompt Payment Act of 1982, and the Financial Integrity Act of 1982.

Instructions for purchasing copies of any of these materials are on the last page of this volume.

GENERAL NOTES

1. All years referred to are fiscal years, unless otherwise noted.
2. Detail in the tables, text, and charts of this volume may not add to the totals because of rounding.
3. Sequestration of budgetary resources in 1986 is required by the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 (P.L. 99-177). All 1986 data shown in this volume incorporate the effects of sequestration, unless otherwise noted.

EXPLANATION OF ESTIMATES

Part I contains various tables and certain schedules in support of the budget, including explanatory statements of the work to be performed and the money needed, as well as the text of the language proposed for enactment by Congress on each item for which congressional action in an appropriation bill is required. It also contains the text of general provisions of appropriations acts, proposed for enactment by the Congress, that apply to entire agencies or groups of agencies.

ARRANGEMENT

The chapters of Part I reflect the branches of Government, and the cabinet departments, selected independent agencies, and other activities of the executive branch. Most of the smaller agencies in the executive branch are grouped in one chapter—"Other independent agencies."

Each chapter is organized by major subordinate organizations within the agency (usually bureaus) or by major program area. For each bureau or major program area, Federal funds, covering the funds that are not set aside in "trust," precede trust funds, covering moneys that are held by the Government in accounts established by law or by trust agreement for specific purposes. Within each fund group, accounts with new budget authority in 1987 generally will precede those without such an entry. Legislation has been enacted that places the Old-Age and Survivors Insurance and Disability Insurance trust funds outside the budget totals. In this volume, these accounts are presented in a separate chapter, Health and Human Services, Social Security.

The proposed language for general provisions of appropriations acts that are applicable to the agency in that chapter appear in a separate section at the end of the chapter. General provisions that apply to specified groups of agencies are placed in the chapter covering the first agency that appears in the respective appropriations act. The general provisions that are Government-wide in scope (identified "Departments, Agencies, and Corporations"), normally contained in the Treasury, Postal Service, and General Government Appropriations Act, are placed at the end of the Executive Office of the President chapter.

An explanation of the types of funds included in the budget may be found in Part 6b of The Budget of the United States Government, 1987.

FORM OF DETAILED MATERIAL

APPROPRIATIONS LANGUAGE

The language proposed for inclusion in the 1987 appropriations acts is printed following the account title. The language of the 1986 appropriations acts, printed in roman type, is used as a base. Brackets enclose material that is proposed for deletion; italic type indicates proposed new language. At the end of the final language paragraph, and printed in italics within parentheses, are citations to any relevant authorizing legislation and to the appropriations act from which the basic text of the 1986 language is taken. An illustration of proposed appropriations language for 1987 follows:

OPERATING EXPENSES

For necessary expenses of the Office of Climate Information, [$29,440,000] $28,920,000 of which [$150,000] $400,000 shall remain available until expended. (34 U.S.C. 218 et seq.; Department of Government Appropriation Act, 1986.)

BASIS FOR SCHEDULES

The 1985 column of this budget generally presents the actual transactions and balances for that year, as recorded in agency accounts.

For 1986, the regular schedules include enacted appropriations. In addition, indefinite appropriations are included on the basis of amounts likely to be required. When the annual appropriation has not been enacted, the regular schedules will include the amounts provided under the authority of a continuing resolution. Reductions pursuant to the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 (Public Law 99-177) are presented in separate schedules immediately following the regular schedules and associated information in Part I. Requests for supplemental appropriations, if any, to meet increased 1986 costs are included in Part II. Also included in Part II, in addition to proposed appropriation language and schedules for supplemental requests, are separate schedules for proposed rescissions, the language for which will be transmitted to the Congress in special messages.

The 1987 column of the regular schedules includes proposed appropriations for all programs under existing legislation, including those that require extension or renewal of expiring laws. Amounts for proposed new legislation are shown generally in separate schedules, following the regular schedules or in budget sequence in the respective bureau. These schedules are headed "Proposed for later transmittal under proposed legislation." Appropriation language is included with the regular schedules, but not with the separate schedules for proposed legislation. Necessary appropriations language will be transmitted later upon enactment of the proposed legislation. In some cases, when the amount requested in the budget is less than the amount required for the program level mandated in existing authorizing legislation (as in the case of certain entitlement programs), the reduced amount is reflected in the proposed appropriation language and the regular schedules. The proposed change in the authorizing legislation may be included in the appropriation language transmitted with the budget or in proposed legislation, to be transmitted separately. In these cases, the words, "Legislative Action Required" appear at the end of the language.

PROGRAM AND FINANCING SCHEDULE

This schedule consists of three parts.

In the "Program by activities" section, obligations generally are shown for specific activities or projects. The activity structure is developed individually for each appropriation or fund account to provide a meaningful presentation of information for the program being financed. That structure is tailored to the individual account and is not uniform across the Government. When the amounts of obligations that are financed from collections credited to an account (reimbursements) are significant, "Reimbursable program" obligations are shown separately from "Direct program" obligations. When the amounts are significant, "Capital investments" are shown separately from "Operating expenses." The last entry "Total obligations," indicates the minimum amount of budgetary resources that must be available to the appropriation or fund account in that year.

The "Financing" section shows the budgetary resources available or estimated to be available to finance the total obligations. First are the amounts of offsetting collections credited to the account. Next are unobligated balances of budgetary resources (that have not expired) brought forward from the end of the prior year. Finally, those amounts that were available for obligation during the year and were not used, but continue to be available, are shown as an unobligated balance available, end of year. That balance is carried forward and usually obligated in a subsequent year. Other adjusting entries may be included. The residual is the new budget authority required to finance the program. Where more than one kind of budget authority is provided, that information is shown. In some cases, the availability of budgetary resources may be restrained by legally binding limitations on obligations for direct loans or for other purposes. Such limitations are usually included in appropriations language.

The "Relation of obligations to outlays" section shows the difference between obligations, which may not be liquidated in the same year in which they are incurred, and outlays. The entry "obligations incurred, net," shows the amount of new obligations incurred in the year, less offsetting collections credited to the account. The amount of obligations that were incurred in previous years but not liquidated, are entered as an obligated balance, start of year. Similarly, an end of year obligated balance is entered. Certain adjusting entries may be included. The residual is the net amount of outlays resulting from the liquidation of obligations incurred in that year and previous years.

The account identification code, found at the head of the program and financing schedule, facilitates computer processing of budgetary information. The last three digits of this code represent the functional category to which the account is classified. Functional classification permits presentation of budget authority and outlays in terms of their purpose, rather than the organization administering the program or the account under which these funds are made available. For example, the 452 at the top of the following schedule indicates that the purpose of the program financed by this appropriation is Area and regional development—a subfunction within major function 450, Community and regional development. When the outlays from an account are split between two or more subfunctions within a single major function, the code of the major function is used. In those few cases where the outlays from an account are split between two or more functions, a code of 999 is used. A detailed discussion of how Federal programs are addressed to each identified national need is included in Part 5 of the budget. The individual functional categories are identified with each appropriation or fund account in the Budget by Agency and Account in Part 6d of the budget.

NARRATIVE STATEMENT OF PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

Narrative statements present briefly the objectives of the program and the work to be financed primarily for 1987. Measures of expected performance may be included, and the relationship to the financial estimates is described.

SCHEDULE OF OBJECT CLASSIFICATION AND PERSONNEL SUMMARY

There is shown for each account a schedule of obligations, according to the following uniform list of object classifications:

10 PERSONAL SERVICES AND BENEFITS
11 Personnel compensation
12 Personnel benefits
13 Benefits for former personnel

20 CONTRACTUAL SERVICES AND SUPPLIES
21 Travel and transportation of persons
22 Transportation of things

These object classes reflect the nature of the things or services purchased, regardless of the purpose of the program for which they are used.

Except for revolving funds, reimbursable obligations are aggregated in a single line and not identified by object class. Data, classified by object, are illustrated in the following schedule:

99.9	Total obligations	30,396	30,590	29,300

Several of the object classes are divided into subclasses—personnel compensation, for example, is shown separately for full-time permanent employees, for other than full-time employees, and for certain other payments. Standard level user charges are rental payments assessed by the General Services Administration for space (leased and Government-owned) and building services.

When obligations for personnel compensation are shown in the object classification schedule, a personnel summary generally will follow the object classification schedule, as illustrated below:

Personnel Summary

Direct:
Total number of full-time permanent positions	813	785	741
Total compensable workyears:
Full-time equivalent employment	774	748	706
Full-time equivalent of overtime and holiday hours	23	17	19
Reimbursable:
Total number of full-time permanent positions	9	13	14
Total compensable workyears: Full-time equivalent employment	8	12	13

Control of Federal civilian employment generally is on a full-time equivalent (FTE) or workyear basis for the executive branch.

BUSINESS-TYPE BUDGET STATEMENTS

Business-type budget statements are presented for activities specifically required by the Government Corporation Control Act or similar legislation and generally for other revolving and trust revolving funds conducting business with the public. They are not usually presented for funds conducting business within the Government.

Statement of Revenue and Expense

For many revolving funds there is a statement of revenue and expense that shows the resulting net income or loss for the year. This statement usually includes accrued revenue (e.g., revenue earned) and accrued expenditures (e.g., including cost incurred but not yet paid), whether funded or unfunded.

Revenue and Expense (in thousands of dollars)

Nonoperating income: Interest from U.S. securities	8,092	9,874	12,791
Net income for the year	28,887	34,124	43,771

Statement of Financial Condition

The statement of financial condition shows assets, liabilities, and Government equity for the fund at the close of each fiscal year. In addition to this information, which is similar to commercial balance sheet data, budget needs also require additional information, shown in the equity section. A disclosure is made of obligations incurred that have not yet accrued into liabilities (undelivered orders) and of budgetary resources for which no funding has been received (unfinanced budgetary resources). Unfinanced budgetary resources include orders from Federal customers that have not been filled (unfilled orders), and unfinanced budget authority in the form of authority to borrow for which borrowing has not taken place, and contract authority for which liquidating cash has not been received. Orders received from the public must be accompanied by advance payment.

The last section of the balance sheet is an "Analysis of Changes in Government Equity." This section sets forth for paid-in capital and retained income, as appropriate, the beginning balance, transactions (changes) during the year, and the balance at the end of the year.

FEDERAL CREDIT SCHEDULES

As part of an effort to establish systematic control of the levels of Federal credit during any fiscal year, the budget appendix includes annual limitations on the amount of obligations for direct loans and commitments for guaranteed loans in appropriations language for appropriations or funds with credit activity. For those accounts under which Federal credit is extended, schedules for the status of direct loans and the status of guaranteed loans summarize activity for the years shown.

Status of Direct Loans

A direct loan obligation is a legal or binding agreement that results in: (1) a disbursement of funds to a non-Federal entity by a Federal agency (including the Federal Financing Bank (FFB) on behalf of a Federal agency) that is contracted to be repaid, with or without interest; (2) a purchase of non-Federal loans by a Federal agency through secondary market operations; (3) an acquisition of guaranteed non-Federal loans by a Federal agency in satisfaction of default or other guarantee claims; or (4) a sale of Federal agency assets to a non-Federal entity on credit terms of more than 90 days duration.

A direct loan is counted against the annual limitation when the principal amount is obligated. Gross obligations for direct loans means the amount obligated during a fiscal year, without reductions for such items as repayments, prepayments, sale of loan assets, defaults, or forgiveness.

For each appropriation or fund with direct loan activity, a schedule is displayed immediately following the program and financing schedule as follows:

1264	Other adjustments, net	734
1290	Outstanding, end of year	66,239	65,789	66,039

Status of Guaranteed Loans

A guaranteed loan commitment is a legal or binding agreement that results in: (1) a non-Federal debt instrument on which the agency pledges to pay part or all of the amount due to a lender or holder in the event of default by the borrower; and (2) a direct Federal loan that an agency has sold to the public under a guarantee, agreement to repurchase, or other form of recourse. Agency guarantees that result in loans by the FFB are counted as direct loans of the FFB and, therefore, will not be counted as guaranteed loans. However, the amount of direct loans made in this manner is subject to limitations on loan guarantee commitments of the originating agency. Loan guarantees include agreements in the form of loan insurance, defined as a type of guarantee in which an agency pledges the use of accumulated insurance premiums to secure lenders against default on the part of borrowers.

A guaranteed loan is counted against the annual limitation when a firm commitment is made, i.e., when the Government enters into a guarantee agreement to become effective at such time as the lender meets stipulated pre-conditions. A commitment is reported for every guaranteed loan, even though the commitment and the actual loan guarantee may occur simultaneously. Amounts for limitations and in the schedules are the full principal amounts of loans guaranteed whether guaranteed in full or in part. The amount of the Government's contingent liability is shown as a memorandum entry in the schedule. Gross commitments for guaranteed loans means the amount committed during a fiscal year, without reductions for such items as repayments, prepayments, sale of guaranteed loans, or defaults.

For each appropriation or fund account with guaranteed loan activity, a schedule is displayed following the program and financing schedule (or status of direct loans schedule, if there is one) as follows:

Personal services and necessary expenses to provide support for the basic operations of the Library are financed from this appropriation.

Purchase of books and library materials.—The Library's collections are acquired through purchase, gift, exchange, copyright deposit, and official deposit. This includes materials in all subjects, except medicine and agriculture, for the general collections of the Library and domestic and foreign law materials for the law library.

Preparation of books and library materials for use.—Library materials are cataloged for use and are classified for systematic arrangement on the shelves of the collection. Cataloging data is converted to machine-readable form for use by the Library of Congress, other libraries, and cataloging service agencies. The Network Development and MARC Standards Office plans and coordinates the exchange of bibliographic information among major library cooperatives and research facilities.

Cataloging distribution service.—The cataloging distribution service makes available copies of the Library's printed catalog cards, cataloging data in machine-readable form, book catalogs, technical publications, and select bibliographies from the automated data bases.

Research and reader services.—Books and other library materials are provided to readers inside and outside the Library, reference, referral and bibliographic assistance is rendered, and custody of the collections is maintained.

Preservation of library materials.—Library materials are preserved in their original format by being bound or rebound, or by a variety of conservation techniques. Materials are also preserved by converting them to a more durable form through such means as microfilming, by conversion of nitrate film to safety base film, and by the conversion of deteriorating sound recordings to polyester tape. Scientific research on the preservation of library materials is undertaken.

Automated systems support.—Central computer support to all operations of the Library is provided by the Automated Systems Office. This support consists of systems analysis, programming, and operation of central computers, minicomputers and data communication services.

Central support services.—This activity supports the executive staff of the Office of the Librarian; exhibit, information, and publication activities; personnel, budget and finance, procurement, buildings management, and other centralized services. It also includes rental of space off Capitol Hill.

American Folklife Center.—Public Law 94-201 established the American Folklife Center in the Library of Congress "to preserve and present American folklife" through field documentation, consultancies, research, publishing, exhibition and dissemination of information.

Deacidification facility.—Public Law 98-427 authorized the Library of Congress to construct a deacidification facility for the operation of the diethyl zinc preservation process. The funding for this project was provided under Public Law 98-392. The funds are to remain available until expended.

The Copyright Office is responsible for recording copyright claims, assignments, and renewals, for supplying copyright information to the public, for collecting and accounting for copyright fees, and for printing complete and indexed catalogs for each class of copyright entries. The Office is conducted for the most part on a self-sustaining basis. The amount requested is substantially counterbalanced by fees received for services rendered and the value of books and other library materials deposited in accordance with the Copyright Act and transferred to the Library of Congress. The income and obligations for 1985, and estimates for 1986 and 1987 are as follows:

Income:
Gross receipts	6,920,262	7,250,000	7,424,000
Estimated value of materials deposited and transferred to the Library of Congress	7,111,494	7,300,000	7,500,000
Total income	14,031,756	14,550,000	14,924,000
Obligations	17,234,727	17,631,000	18,428,000

The effort described under each of the activities are predicated on an estimated 550,000 copyright registrations during 1987, an estimated 540,000 during 1986, and registrations of 540,081 during 1985.

Receiving and accounting for applications, fees, and correspondence.—Materials received by the Copyright Office are assembled and routed; accounts are maintained for all moneys received; records relating to the registration of copyrights are filed; and materials are deposited in accordance with the Copyright Act.

Examining copyright applications.—All applications and deposits are examined before issuance of registration certificates or recordings of documents to determine whether the provisions of the Copyright Act have been satisfied.

Indexing and cataloging materials received.—The Register of Copyrights is required to print complete and indexed catalogs of all items registered. The catalog entries prepared by the Copyright Office are made available in part to the Library for its general operations. It is estimated that for 1987 the number of items to be cataloged will be 540,000.

Reference service.—The Copyright Office makes available to the public information concerning the provisions of the Copyright Act, including procedures, policies, and rulings. Information concerning registrations is furnished on a fee basis. Obtaining compliance with registration requirements is also part of this activity.

Printing the catalog of copyright entries and bulletins of decisions.—Catalogs for each class of copyright entries and bulletins of copyright decisions are printed and made available to the public.

Records management.—The Records Management Division is responsible for storing and maintaining records related to the copyright registrations process.

General supervision and legal services.—The work of the Copyright Office includes legal supervision and research into the present copyright law and international copyright relations. It also involves a study of improvement of the domestic law and our international copyright relations.

Licensing Division.—The Licensing Division performs the responsibilities connected with the registration of cable television stations and the licensing of jukeboxes.

Policy analysis and research.—The Congressional Research Service provides objective, nonpartisan analytical and consultative services to the Members and committees of Congress, assisting them in the analysis, appraisal, and evaluation of any subject matter of legislative concern, including recommendations submitted to the Congress by the Executive Branch. Research services are also provided to assist Congress with its oversight, representative, and other responsibilities. Support takes the form of background studies, in-depth policy analyses, consultations, briefings, legal research, continuous liaison with committees, assistance with committee hearings, public policy seminars for Members and congressional staff, and related data and materials. In order to respond most effectively to the broad range of congressional inquiries, the Service supplements individually tailored products with Issue Briefs, Reports, Committee Prints, and "Info Packs", which are collections of both CRS products and carefully selected materials from outside sources that provide background material on issues of very high congressional interest. Lists of subjects and policy areas that a committee might profitably pursue are periodically made available to each congressional committee. As provided by statute, the Service prepares decennially the Constitution of the United States—Analysis and Interpretation, and supplements at 2-year intervals, prepares compendiums for the annual national high school and college debate topics, and provides assistance to the Congressional Budget Office, the Office of Technology Assessment, and the General Accounting Office.

Documentation and status of legislation.—The Service prepares and publishes for distribution to the Congress the Digest of Public General Bills and Resolutions, including summaries of all public bills and resolutions introduced in Congress, the status of bills receiving action, and various pertinent indexes. Upon request, the Service prepares legislative history memorandums on bills for which hearings have been announced, and compiles and makes available to each committee reports on legislatively authorized programs and activities within that committee's jurisdiction that are scheduled to terminate during the current Congress.

Information and reference services.—The Congressional Research Service provides extensive information and reference assistance to Members and committees. Reference files containing clippings, pamphlets, and documents and automated information services are maintained for rapid information retrieval. Lists of selected reports, prepared by CRS staff on legislative issues, are regularly distributed to congressional offices. To provide faster responses and in-person services, the Service also maintains reference centers in congressional office buildings and the Congressional Reading Rooms in the Madison and Jefferson Buildings of the Library of Congress.

Executive direction and support.—Providing overall supervision and administrative support to the entire Congressional Research Service is the responsibility of the Office of the Director and the administrative personnel.

The National Library Service for the Blind and Physically Handicapped (NLS) is responsible for administering a national program to provide reading material for blind and physically handicapped residents of the United States and its outlying areas and for U.S. citizens residing abroad.

Direct service to users.—During the past 5-year period, 1981–85, the number of blind and physically handicapped readers throughout the country has grown from over 633,000 to over 641,000 and circulation from approximately 17,703,000 units (volumes and containers) to over 19,700,000.

Support services.—A variety of professional, technical, and clerical functions are performed by NLS's staff. A combined total of over 28,000 requests for interlibrary loan searches or information concerning library and related services available to the blind and to other physically handicapped persons were received in 1985, and approximately 3,000 copyright permissions were granted.

The Librarian of Congress may use foreign currencies to provide information of technical, scientific, cultural, or educational significance to the United States through the collection of foreign library materials and the distribution of copies thereof to libraries and research centers in the United States. In 1987, it is requested that operations in Pakistan be funded on a smaller scale in order to continue use of excess Pakistani rupees. Of the total amount requested in 1987, $293,000 will be paid in foreign currencies, while $97,000 will provide U.S. dollar support.

Acquisition of books and other library materials.*—Based upon the requirements of other Federal agencies and certain research libraries in the United States, publications and other library materials are purchased in multiple copies and distributed to selected libraries and research centers in the United States, including the Library of Congress.

Program support (U.S. dollars).*—U.S. dollars are required to pay certain expenses which cannot be paid by foreign currencies, such as the salary of the field director, shared administrative support provided by the Department of State, travel in some instances, and equipment and supplies which cannot be procured abroad.

The Office of the Superintendent of Documents operates under a separate appropriation which provides funds for: (1) the mailing for Members of Congress and other Government agencies of certain Government publications, as authorized by law; (2) the distribution of Government publications to designated depository libraries; (3) the compilation of catalogs and indexes of Government publications; and (4) for 1987, the International Exchange Program which previously has been charged to the establishment issuing the publication. These four functions are related to the publication activity of other agencies and to the demands of the public, Members of Congress, and depository libraries. Consequently, Documents can exercise little control over the volume of work which it may be called upon to perform. A description of these four functions follows:

Distribution for other Government agencies and Members of Congress.—The Office of Superintendent of Documents maintains mailing lists and mails, at the request of Government agencies and Members of Congress, certain publications specified by public law.

Depository library distribution.—As required, Government publications are supplied to libraries which are designated as depositories for Government publications.

Cataloging and indexing.—The Office of Superintendent of Documents is charged with preparing catalogs and indexes of all publications issued by the Federal Government. The principal publication is the "Monthly Catalog of U.S. Government Publications."

International exchange.—The Office of Superintendent of Documents distributes Government publications to foreign governments which agree, as indicated by the Library of Congress, to send to the United States similar publications of their governments for delivery to the Library of Congress.

The Government Printing Office executes orders for printing, binding, and blankbook work, placed by Congress and the various agencies of the Federal Government, and furnishes on order, blank paper, inks, and similar supplies. The Government Printing Office also sells publications to the public through its sales of publications program.

All such work is financed through the Government Printing Office revolving fund (44 U.S.C. 309). The fund is reimbursed by the customer agencies, receipts from sales of publications to the general public, and, except for the excess of receipts over costs associated with the sale of publications to the public, net operating income is retained for reuse by the fund.

trusts, and windfall profit tax on domestic crude oil. It also renders declaratory judgments regarding the qualification or continuing qualification (including revocations of rulings on the exemptions) of retirement plans.

The Tax Court has jurisdiction to render declaratory judgments with respect to exempt organization status determinations pursuant to section 501(c)(3), Internal Revenue Code, and to enter declaratory judgments on the tax treatment of interest on proposed issues of Government obligations. In addition, the court has jurisdiction over actions to restrain disclosure and to obtain additional disclosure with respect to public inspection of written determinations issued by the Internal Revenue Service, and actions to compel the disclosure of the identity of third-party contacts relating to written determinations made by the Internal Revenue Service.

For 1987, the court proposes a trial program of 798 weeks consisting of 587 weeks of regular trial sessions and 211 weeks of small tax case sessions. Trials are held in approximately 90 cities throughout the United States.

The actual and estimated work volume of the court is presented in the following tabulation:

The Commission on Security and Cooperation in Europe was created to monitor compliance with that code of conduct, particularly in regard to what is called "Basket Three" of the Final Act, the Provisions on Cooperation in Humanitarian and Other Fields. The law establishing the Commission on Security and Cooperation in Europe also mandated it to monitor and encourage U.S. Government and private activities designed to expand East-West trade and the exchange of people and ideas. The Commission will receive semiannual reports from the President on the signatories' compliance with the Final Act and on U.S. activities in trade and cultural/humanitarian exchange and it will itself make advisory reports to the Congress on the progress of implementation.

The Commission is made up of six Senators, six Members of the House of Representatives and one Commissioner each from the Departments of State, Defense, and Commerce.

The Court also has exclusive jurisdiction of (1) appeals from interlocutory orders or decrees in cases where the court would have jurisdiction of the appeal; and (2) appeals from judgments in civil actions for patent infringement otherwise appealable to the court and final except for accounting. SEC. [612] 610. No part of any appropriation contained in, or funds made available by this or any other Act, shall be available for any agency to pay to the Administrator of the General Services Administration a higher rate per square foot for rental of space and services (established pursuant to section 210(j) of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949, as amended) than the rate per square foot established for the space and services by the General Services Administratration for the current fiscal year and for which appropriations were granted.

SEC. [613] 611. (a)[(1)] Notwithstanding any other provision of law, and except as otherwise provided in this section, no part of any of the funds appropriated for the fiscal years [ending September 30, 1986] 1987, or [September 30, 1987] 1988, by this Act or any other Act, may be used to pay any prevailing rate employee described in section 5342(a)(2)(A) of title 5, United States Code, or any employee covered by section 5348 of that title[, on or after the applicable date]—

(1) during the period from the date of expiration of the limitation imposed by section [616(a)(2)] 613 of H.R. [5798] 3036, incorporated by reference in section 101(j) of Public Law [98-473] 99-190, [ceases to apply, at a rate that differs from] until the first day of the first applicable pay period that begins not less than ninety days after that date, in an amount that exceeds the rate payable for the applicable grade and step of the applicable wage schedule in accordance with such section [616(a)(2), except as provided under paragraph (2) of this subsection.] 613; and

(2) [The Office of Personnel Management shall provide for any necessary adjustments of wage schedules and rates for the period covered by paragraph (1) of this subsection for employees subject to paragraph (1) so as to ensure that—]

[(A) such wage schedules and rates are adjusted upwards or downwards, as the case may be, by an average percentage amount consistent with any adjustment taking effect for the General Schedule under section 5305 of title 5, United States Code, or other provision of law during such period; and]

[(B) any such adjustment takes effect in each affected wage area at a time that bears the same relationship to the normal effective date of wage adjustments in that wage area that the effective date of the General Schedule adjustment bears to the effective date specified in section 5305(a)(2) of title 5, United States Code.] during the period consisting of the remainder, if any, of fiscal year 1987 and that portion of fiscal year 1988 that precedes the normal effective date of the applicable wage survey adjustment that is to be effective in fiscal year 1988, in an amount that exceeds, as a result of a wage survey adjustment, the rate payable under paragraph (1) of this subsection by more than the overall average percentage adjustment in the General Schedule during fiscal year 1987.

(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of section 9(b) of Public Law 92-392 or section 704(b) of Public Law 95-454, the provisions of subsection (a) of this section shall apply (in such manner as the Office of Personnel Management shall prescribe) to any prevailing rate employee to whom such section 9(b) applies[, except that the provisions of subsection (a) may not apply to any increase in a wage schedule or rate that is required by the terms of a contract entered into before the date of enactment of this Act].

(c) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no prevailing rate employee described in subparagraph (B) or (C) of section 5342(a)(2) of title 5, United States Code, may be paid during the periods for which subsection (a) of this section is in effect at [rates] a rate that exceeds the rates that would be payable under subsection (a) were subsection (a) applicable to such employee.

(d) For the purpose of this section, the rates payable to an employee[s] who [are] is covered by this section and who [are] is paid from a schedule that was not in existence on September 30, [1985] 1986, shall be determined under regulations prescribed by the [President] Office of Personnel Management.

(e) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, rates of premium pay for employees subject to this section [shall] may not be changed from the rates in effect on September 30, [1985] 1986, except to the extent determined by the Office of Personnel Management to be consistent with the purpose of this section.

(f) The provisions of this section shall apply with respect to pay for services performed by any affected employee on or after October 1, [1985] 1986.

(g) For the purpose of administering any provision of law, rule, or regulation that provides premium pay, retirement, life insurance, or any other employee benefit, that requires any deduction or contribution, or that imposes any requirement or limitation, on the basis of a rate of salary or basic pay, the rate of salary or basic pay payable after the application of this section shall be treated as the rate of salary or basic pay.

(h) Nothing in this section may be construed to permit or require the payment to any employee covered by this section at a rate in excess of the rate that would be payable were this section not in effect.

(i) The Office of Personnel Management may provide for exceptions to the limitations imposed by this section if the Office determines that such exceptions are necessary to ensure the recruitment or retention of qualified employees.

[Sec. 614. None of the funds made available in this Act may be used to plan, implement, or administer (1) any reduction in the number of regions, districts or entry processing locations of the United States Customs Service; or (2) any consolidation or centralization of duty assessment or appraisement functions of any offices of the United States Customs Service.]

Sec. [615] 612. During the period in which the head of any department or agency, or any other officer or civilian employee of the Government appointed by the President of the United States, holds office, no funds may be obligated or expended in excess of $5,000 to renovate, remodel, furnish, or redecorate the office of such department head, agency head, officer, or employee, or to purchase furniture or make improvements for any such office, unless such renovation, remodeling, furnishing, or redecoration is expressly approved by the Committees on Appropriations of the House and Senate.

[Sec. 616. The increase in postage rates for nonprofit and certain other mailers announced by the Governors of the Postal Service in Resolution No 85-7 shall not take effect until January 1, 1986.]

[Sec. 617. (a) Section 3626(a) of title 39, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(a) In the administration of subchapters II and III of this chapter, each time rates of postage are established for mail under former sections 4358, 4452 (b) and (c), and 4554 (b) and (c) of this title, the estimated revenues to be received for each class or kind of such mail shall be equal to the direct and indirect postal costs attributable to mail of such class or kind excluding all costs of the Postal Service."

(b) This section is effective January 1, 1986.]

[Sec. 618. If the postage rate delay required by section 616 of this Act causes a shortfall in postal revenues from the amounts which would have been provided by the adjustment contemplated by section 3627 of title 39, United States Code, the Postal Service shall request a supplemental appropriation to avoid placing the burden of that shortfall on unsubsidized mailers.]

[Sec. 619. (a) If any individual or entity which provides or proposes to provide child care services for Federal employees applies to the officer or agency of the United States charged with the allotment of space in the Federal buildings in the community or district in which such individual or entity provides or proposes to provide such services, such officer or agency may allot space in such a building to such individual or entity if—

(1) such space is available: and

(2) such officer or agency determines that such space will be used to provide child care services to a group of individuals of whom at least 95 per centum are Federal employees.]

[(b)(1) If an officer or agency allots space to an individual or entity under subsection (a), such space may be provided to such individual or entity without charge for rent or services.]

[(2) If there is an agreement for the payment of costs associated with the provision of space allotted under subsection (a) or services provided in connection with such space, nothing in title 31, United States Code, or any other provision of law, shall be construed to prohibit or restrict payment by reimbursement to the miscellaneous receipts or other appropriate account of the Treasury.]

[(3) For the purpose of this section, the term "service" includes the providing of lighting, heating, cooling, electricity, office furniture, office machines and equipment, telephone service (including installation of lines and equipment and other expenses associated with telephone service), and security system (including installation and other expenses associated with security systems).]

Sec. [139] 613. (a) [Notwithstanding section 101(i) and section 102(c) of this joint resolution, and notwithstanding any provision of H.R. 3036, if] If any individual or entity which provides or proposes to provide child care services for Federal employees applies to the officer or agency of the United States charged with the allotment of space in the Federal buildings in the community or district in which such individual or entity provides or proposes to provide such services, such officer or agency may allot space in such a building to such individual or entity if—

(1) such space is available;

(2) such officer or agency determines that such space will be used to provide child care services to a group of individuals of whom at least 50 percent are Federal employees; and

(3) such officer or agency determines that such individual or entity will give priority for available child care services in such space to Federal employees.

(b)(1) If an officer or agency allots space to an individual or entity under subsection (a), such space may be provided to such individual or entity without charge for rent or services.

(2) If there is an agreement for the payment of costs associated with the provision of space allotted under subsection (a) or services provided in connection with such space, nothing in title 31, United States Code, or any other provision of law, shall be construed to prohibit or restrict payment by reimbursement to the miscellaneous receipts or other appropriate account of the Treasury.

(3) For the purpose of this section, the term "services" includes the providing of lighting, heating, cooling, electricity, office furniture, office machines and equipment, telephone service (including installation of lines and equipment and other expenses associated with telephone service), and security systems (including installation and other expenses associated with security systems). (Public Law 99-190, making continuing appropriations for the fiscal year 1986.)

The International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (World Bank) finances development projects in less developed countries. By applying banking principles to the achievement of development goals, it promotes increased economic productivity and helps developing economies meet more of the basic needs of their peoples. Since its founding in 1945, the Bank has made loan commitments of approximately $103 billion.

The Bank's 1985 lending program included 131 loan commitments to 44 countries for a total of $11.4 billion. More than twice this amount was contributed to these projects by recipient countries, commercial lenders, and other multilateral or bilateral agencies.

The Administration's request for 1987 consists of: (1) $109.7 million in budget authority for paid-in capital subscriptions and $1,353.0 million in program limitations for callable capital subscriptions to provide the last of six equal installments for the $8.8 billion U.S. share of the $40.0 billion 1981 General Capital Increase (GCI); (2) $7.4 million for paid-in capital subscriptions and $66.7 million in program limitations for callable capital subscriptions to the 1970 Selective Capital Increase (SCI); and (3) $65.7 million for paid-in capital subscriptions and $685.5 million in program limitations for callable capital subscriptions to the 1984 SCI.

The International Development Association (IDA), a member of the World Bank Group, provides development financing on highly concessional terms to the world's poorest nations. IDA is the largest source of multilateral lending extended on concessional terms to developing countries. Projects have to meet the same economic and financial standards as other World Bank projects and there has never been a default on an IDA loan by any borrower.

By June 30, 1985, IDA had extended credits totaling $33.3 billion for development projects in 82 countries. IDA assistance is concentrated overwhelmingly in the poorest countries—mainly those with an annual per capita gross national product of less than $400 in 1984 dollars. In 1985, IDA's lending program included 105 credits to 45 countries for a total of $3.0 billion.

The Seventh Replenishment of IDA resources, totaling $9 billion, was approved by the Executive Board on May 24, 1985. The United States has pledged $2.25 billion to the replenishment and the $750 million requested in 1987 is for the third installment on that contribution.

The African Development Bank (AFDB) makes loans at near-market rates for the economic and social development of its African members. Membership in the Bank was restricted to African nations until 1982 when non-regional countries were allowed to join. The U.S. became a member of the Bank on February 8, 1983 and agreed to subscribe to $360 million of AFDB capital over 5 years.

In 1985, the AFDB lent $618 million for development projects in 22 countries. The Bank expects to lend $720 million in 1986.

The 1987 request of $18 million of paid-in capital and $54 million of program limitations for callable capital subscriptions is for the fifth installment on the original U.S. commitment.

The Multilateral Investment Guarantee Agency (MIGA) is a proposed international development institution designed to encourage the flow of investment to and among developing countries by: (1) issuing guarantees against noncommercial risks; (2) carrying out a wide range of investment promotion activities; and (3) encouraging sound investment policies in member countries. A convention establishing the MIGA has been negotiated under the auspices of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development. A preparatory conference will be held to develop guidelines for Agency operations when twenty countries, including fifteen developing and five developed, have signed the Convention. MIGA is expected to be fully operational by 1987. The administration supports the MIGA Convention and seeks authorization and full funding of U.S. membership in the 1987 budget.

The capital stock of the MIGA will be $1.08 billion. The U.S. share will be $222 million or 20.5 percent of the total. The request for 1987 is $44.4 million of budget authority, half to be paid in cash and the remainder to be paid in the form of non-negotiable, non-interest-bearing promissory notes. The remainder of the request ($177.6 million) represents callable capital provided under program limitations.

poor. Loans and grants under this program are concentrated in those areas in which the United States has special expertise and which promise the greatest opportunity for the poor to better their lives.

Funds are provided under eight separate activities:

Agriculture, rural development and nutrition.—Supports efforts to increase food production in the developing countries by improving the productivity and income of small farmers, creating greater rural employment opportunities, enhancing rural infrastructure and the environment, improving nutrition and removing impediments to equitable economic growth.

Population planning.—Supports efforts to reduce population growth rates in developing countries and to provide families with effective options in choosing the number and spacing of their children.

Health.—Assists developing countries to increase access to health care, family planning and nutrition services, to make safe water and adequate sanitation more widely available, to reduce the incidence of debilitating tropical diseases, malnutrition, diarrheal infections, measles and other preventable diseases, and to increase governmental capacity to plan and manage their health resources.

Child survival fund.—Provides funds for programs designed to deal directly with the special health needs of children and mothers. Includes oral rehydration therapy to combat diarrheal diseases, immunization and other primary health care efforts aimed at cutting in half infant and child mortality rates in developing countries.

Education and human resources.—Supports the efforts of developing countries to provide basic education for children, improve the fundamental life skills of adults, and improve the management skills and performance of managers of development programs.

Energy and selected development activities.—Provides assistance to developing countries to better contend with national energy problems, to cope with employment and income problems in urban areas, to mitigate the problems of rapid urban migration, and to improve environmental management and resource planning. This activity also facilitates the involvement of U.S. private voluntary organizations in development and helps improve access by developing countries to U.S. scientific and technical expertise.

Science and technology.—Supports new and innovative research on problems of development and assists developing countries in improving their scientific and technological capacities.

Sahel development program.—The Sahel program helps promote food self-sufficiency and self-sustaining economic growth in the Sahel region of Africa. Assistance is furnished in accordance with a long-term, multidonor development plan based on equitable burden sharing with other donors and the assisted African countries. In 1987, as in 1986, the administration proposes merging the Sahel Development program with the functional development assistance program.

2299	U.S. contingent liability for guaranteed loans outstanding, end of year	1,175,631	1,269,131	1,360,131

The Housing guaranty program extends guaranties to assist developing countries in formulating and executing sound housing and community development policies that meet the needs of lower income groups. Activities to be carried out will emphasize: (1) sites and services and core housing projects providing homesites and shelter for poor families; (2) slum upgrading projects designed to conserve and improve existing shelter; (3) low-income shelter projects designed for demonstration or institution building purposes; and (4) project-related community facilities and services. The Administration will not request guarantee authority for Housing and Other Credit Guaranty Programs after 1986. The request for budget authority in 1987 is to replenish the Housing Guaranty reserve, depleted as a result of increased loan reschedulings.

The private sector revolving fund expands the AID private sector initiative through new financing mechanisms and support of business activities. For example, loans are made to local private sector firms and credit institutions in developing countries. A capitalization totaling $60 million is intended to make the fund totally self-sustaining. Repayments of appropriated funds will be made from fees, interest payments, and other reflows. Repayment of appropriated funds to the Treasury will begin once the revolving fund reaches $100 million in assets.

Section 608 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 created a revolving fund to finance the acquisition and rehabilitation at minimal cost of U.S. Government-owned excess property for purchase by friendly countries and eligible organizations, for use in conjunction with economic development programs. Excess property includes heavy construction equipment, vehicles, heavy machinery, electrical generating equipment, and medical equipment and supplies. The program is self-financed from service fees and reimbursements by equipment purchasers ultimately funded from development assistance appropriations to the Agency for International Development.

Peace Corps operating expenses provide direct and indirect support for over 5,000 Americans engaged in voluntary services in over 60 countries worldwide. The volunteers help fill the trained manpower needs of developing countries and encourage self-sustaining development of skilled manpower. The Peace Corps promotes mutual understanding between the peoples of the developing world and the United States and focuses the attention of the American people on the concepts of voluntarism and self-help at the grassroots level.

Volunteer operations.—The financial resources associated with this budget activity provide for the placement, training and direct support of Peace Corps Volunteers overseas. These resources will fund approximately 5,100 volunteer years of service worldwide in 1987.

Recruitment and development education.—This activity provides for volunteer recruitment and selection, development education, and related activities of the Peace Corps. In 1987, approximately 2,700 trainees qualified to enter Peace Corps service will be selected.

Program development and support.—This activity funds the administrative expenses and general overhead costs associated with the Peace Corps program, including reimbursements to the Department of State for administrative support overseas.

The Overseas Private Investment Corporation encourages the participation of United States private capital and skills in the economic and social development of less developed friendly countries. Its primary programs are: (1) political risk insurance against losses due to expropriation, inconvertibility, and war damage; and (2) investment financing through loans and guaranteed loans. The Corporation operates on a self-sustaining basis. The Administration has decided that the Corporation should be privatized. During 1986, the Administration will evaluate alternative means of achieving this objective.

The Fair Export Financing Program is part of the President's trade initiative to counter unfair trade practices announced on September 23, 1985. This program will be used to combat the predatory use by our foreign competitors of government subsidized credit for commercial purposes. Under this program, the Treasury Department will determine, with the advice of the National Advisory Committee on International Monetary and Financial Policy, when funds should be used to reduce the cost of loans available to foreign buyers of U.S. exports. These funds will promote efforts by the United States to eliminate through negotiations unfair export financing. Authorizing legislation to implement this program has already been transmitted.

As of September 30, 1985 the current dollar value of the U.S. quota denominated in Special Drawing Rights (SDR), the IMF's unit of account, was $18,983 million.

Use by the IMF of the quota commitment does not result in net budget outlays because the United States receives an increase in its international monetary reserves corresponding to any transfer of dollars to the IMF under the U.S. quota subscription. The United States can use these reserves automatically to meet a balance of payments financing need. During 1985, net IMF use of dollars was $0.6 billion.

The Supplementary Financing Facility was created to augment temporarily the ability of the IMF to assist member countries with serious balance of payments problems, thereby allowing these countries time to implement required policy measures without resorting to abrupt and harmful restrictions on trade and payments. The United States and other countries agreed to finance the facility by making available to the IMF lines of credit totalling 7,784 Special Drawing Rights (about $8.2 billion at the September 30, 1985 exchange rate) of which the U.S. commitment was 1,450 million SDR (but not to exceed $1,831 million appropriated). As of September 30, 1985, U.S. claims on the IMF under the Supplementary Financing Facility had declined to SDR 1,171 million ($1,241 million) as a consequence of repayments by the IMF.

GENERAL ARRANGEMENTS TO BORROW, LOANS TO INTERNATIONAL MONETARY FUND—Continued

The General Arrangements to Borrow (GAB) were established in 1962 by 10 industrial countries, including the United States, as a means of supplementing the IMF's resources when needed to forestall or cope with an impairment of the international monetary system. Each participant agreed to provide specific amounts of its currency to help finance drawings from the IMF by another GAB participant. GAB members agreed in early 1983 to increase their financial commitments to the GAB and to allow the IMF, in certain strictly defined circumstances, to activate the GAB to provide financing for any IMF member. Total GAB commitments were increased from SDR 6.3 billion to SDR 17 billion, with the U.S. share rising from $2.0 billion to SDR 4.250 billion, approximately $4.5 billion at the September 30, 1985 exchange rate. Financing extended by the United States under the GAB does not result in any net budget outlays because the United States receives an increase in its international reserve assets corresponding to any transfer to the IMF under the U.S. credit line.

During 1985, no calls were made on the U.S. commitment under the GAB, and no U.S. loans were outstanding at the end of the fiscal year.

This revolving fund finances the acquisition of defense articles and defense services in anticipation of their transfer to foreign countries and international organizations. The fund enhances the ability of the United States to respond to urgent requirements of allied and friendly governments for military equipment while minimizing the adverse impact on U.S. forces due to diversions from production or U.S. military stocks. The account is capitalized by foreign military sales receipts from the use of United States Government assets and recoupment of nonrecurring research, development, and production costs. Sec. [529] 524. (a) Not later than January 31 of each year, or at the time of the transmittal by the President to the Congress of the annual presentation materials of foreign assistance, whichever is earlier, the President shall transmit to the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the President of the Senate a full and complete report which assesses, with respect to each foreign country, the degree of support by the government of each such country during the preceding twelve-month period for the foreign policy of the United States. Such report shall include, with respect to each such country which is a member of the United Nations, information to be compiled and supplied by the Permanent Representative of the United States to the United Nations, consisting of a comparison of the overall voting practices in the principal bodies of the United Nations during the preceding twelve-month period of such country and the United States, with special note of the voting and speaking records of such country on issues of major importance to the United States in the General Assembly and the Security Council, and shall also include a report on actions with regard to the United States in important related documents such as the Non-Aligned Communique. [Sec. 531. [Sec. 532. The Congress finds that progress on the peace process in the Middle East is vitally important to United States security interests in the region. The Congress recognizes that, in fulfilling its obligations under the Treaty of Peace Between the Arab Republic of Egypt and the State of Israel, done at Washington on March 26, 1979, Israel incurred severe economic burdens. Furthermore, the Congress recognizes that an economically and militarily secure Israel serves the security interests of the United States, for a secure Israel is an Israel which has the incentive and confidence to continue pursuing the peace process. Therefore, the Congress declares that it is the policy and the intention of the United States that the funds provided in annual appropriations for the Economic Support Fund which are allocated to Israel shall not be less than the annual debt repayment (interest and principal) from Israel to the United States Government in recognition that such a principle serves United States interests in the region.]

Sec. [534] 526. Ceilings and earmarks contained in this Act shall not be applicable to funds or authorities appropriated or otherwise made available by any subsequent act unless such act specifically so directs.

[Sec. 535. The Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of State are directed to submit to the Committees on Foreign Affairs and the Committees on Appropriations by February 1, 1986, a report on the domestic economic policies of those nations receiving economic assistance, either directly or indirectly from the United States including, where appropriate, an analysis of the foreign assistance programs conducted by these recipient nations.]

[Sec. 536. None of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available pursuant to this Act for "Economic Support Fund" or for "Foreign Military Credit Sales" shall be obligated or expended for Lebanon except as provided through the regular notification process of the Committees on Appropriations.]

[Sec. 537. Of the funds made available by this Act for Jamaica and Peru, not more than 50 per centum of the funds made available for each country shall be obligated unless the President determines and reports to the Congress that the Governments of these countries are sufficiently responsive to the United States Government concerns on drug control and that the added expenditures of the funds for that country are in the national interest of the United States: Provided, That this provision shall not be applicable to funds made available to carry out section 481 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961: Provided further, That assistance may be provided to Bolivia for Fiscal Year 1986, under chapter 2 (relating to grant military assistance), chapter 4 (relating to the economic support fund), and chapter 5 (relating to international military education and training) of part II of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, and under chapter 2 of the Arms Export Control Act (relating to foreign military sales financing), only under the following conditions:

For Fiscal Year 1986—

(A) up to 50 percent of the aggregate amount of such assistance allocated for Bolivia may be provided at any time after the President certifies to the Congress that the Government of Bolivia has enacted legislation that will establish its legal coca requirements, provides for the licensing of the number of hectares necessary to produce the legal requirement, and make unlicensed coca production illegal; and

(B) the remaining amount of such assistance may be provided at any time following a certification pursuant to subparagraph (A) if the President certifies to the Congress that the Government of Bolivia achieved the eradication targets for the calendar year 1985 contained in its 1983 narcotics agreements with the United States.]

[Sec. 540. (a) The Secretary of the Treasury shall instruct the United States Executive Directors of the Multilateral Development Banks to—

(1) vigorously promote a commitment of these institutions to add or strengthen professionally trained staff to undertake environmental review of projects; or have development management plans to substantially increase the environmentally trained staff engaged in review of the ecological impacts of prospective projects;

(2) vigorously promote changes in these institutions in their preparation of projects and country programs that will encourage staff and borrower countries to—

(A) actively and regularly involve environmental and health ministers, or comparable representatives, in the preparation of environmentally sensitive projects and in bank-supported country program planning and strategy sessions;

(B) actively and regularly use the resources of available nongovernmental conservation and indigenous peoples' organizations, and consistent with international procurement policies, in the preparation of environmentally sensitive projects and in bank-supported country program planning and strategy sessions;

(3) vigorously promote a commitment of these institutions to increase the proportion of their lending programs supporting environmentally beneficial projects and project components, resource rehabilitation projects and project components, protection of indigenous peoples, and appropriate or light capital technology projects. Examples of such projects include small scale mixed farming and multiple cropping; agroforestry; programs to promote kitchen gardens; watershed management and rehabilitation; high yield woodlots; integrated pest management systems; dune stabilization programs; programs to improve energy efficiency; energy efficient technologies such as small scale hydro projects, rural solar energy systems, and rural and mobil telecommunications systems; and improve efficiency and management of irrigation systems;

(4) Vigorously promote the establishment within the Economic Development Institute of the World Bank to institute a component which provides training in environmental and natural resource planning and program development;

(5) ensure that there is a thorough evaluation within the U.S. Government of the potential environmental problems, and the adequacy of measures to address these problems, associated with all proposed loans for projects involving large impoundments of rivers in tropical countries; penetration roads into relatively undeveloped areas; and agricultural and rural development programs; the potential environmental problems to be addressed in such evaluations shall include those relating to deterioration of water quality, siltation, spread of water borne diseases, forced resettlement, deforestation, threats to the land, health and culture of indigenous peoples, top soil managment, water logging and salinization in irrigation projects, and pesticide misuse and resistance;

(6) call for, by May 31, 1986, separate and special meetings of each of the Boards of Executive Directors of these institutions to discuss their environmental performance, and ways in which this performance can be improved, including alternative projects considered and alternative configurations of projects with specific attention to envirnomental problems associated with the following categories of projects: large impoundments of rivers in tropical countries; penetration roads into relatively undeveloped areas; agriculture and rural development projects; and

(7) in preparation for the meetings referred to in clause (6), the United States Executive Directors of the Multilateral Development Banks shall request the preparation of reviews by the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development and the Inter-American Development Bank from available information, of their environmental performance over the past decade with respect to the categories of projects referred to in clause (6); the United States Executive Directors shall request that these reviews specifically discuss the environmental problems explicitly referred to in clause (5).]

[(b) The Secretary of the Treasury shall prepare and submit to the Committees on Appropriations by March 31, 1986, a report documenting the progress the Multilateral Development Banks have made in implementing the environmental reform measures described in clauses (1) through (4) of subsection (a).]

[(c) The Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of State shall undertake initiatives, in addition to those described in clause (6) of subsection (a) to discuss measures to improve the environmental performance of the Multilateral Development Banks with the representatives, and with the ministries from which they receive their instructions, of other donor nations to these institutions.]

[(d) In the report of the Secretary of the Treasury required by subsection (b) regarding the implementation of staffing measures suggested in clause (1) of subsection (a), the Secretary of the Treasury shall specifically discuss the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development's progress in adding environmentally trained professionals, or in developing and implementing alternative plans for environments staffing in each of the Bank's six regional offices to review projects for their prospective ecological impacts.]

Sec. [541] 527. None of the funds made available to carry out part I of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, may be used to pay for the performance of abortions as a method of family planning or to motivate or coerce any person to practice abortions. None of the funds made available to carry out part I of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, may be used to pay for the performance of involuntary sterilization as a method of family planning or to coerce or provide any financial incentive to any person to undergo sterilizations. None of the funds made available to carry out part I of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, may be used to pay for any biomedical research which relates in whole or in part, to methods of, or the performance of, abortions or involuntary sterilization as a means of family planning. None of the funds made available to carry out part I of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, may be obligated or expended for any country or organization if the President certifies that the use of these funds by any such country or organization would violate any of the above provisions related to abortions and involuntary sterilizations. The Congress reaffirms its commitments to population, development assistance and to the need for informed voluntary family planning.

[Sec. 542. Not less than $15,000,000 of the aggregate amount of funds appropriated by this Act to carry out the provisions of chapter 1 of part I of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 and chapter 4 of part II of that Act, shall be available for the provision of food, medicine, or other humanitarian assistance to the Afghan people, notwithstanding any other provision of law.]

[Sec. 543. None of the funds provided in this Act shall be available for the Sudan if the President determines that the Sudan is acting in a manner that would endanger the stability of the region, or the Camp David peace process.]

[Sec. 544. The President shall make available to the Cambodian non-communist resistance forces not less than $1,500,000 nor more than $5,000,000 of the funds appropriated by this Act for "Military Assistance" and for the "Economic Support Fund", notwithstanding any other provision of law: Provided, That funds appropriated by this Act for this purpose shall be obligated in accordance with the provisions of section 906 of the International Security and Development Cooperation Act of 1985 (Public Law 99-83).]

[Sec. 545. (a) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that no foreign military sales financing appropriated by this Act may be used to finance the procurement by Jordan of United States advanced aircraft, new air defense weapons systems, or other new advanced military weapons systems, and no notification may be made pursuant to section 36(b) of the Arms Export Control Act with respect to a proposed sale to Jordan of United States advanced aircraft, new air defense systems, or other new advanced military weapons systems, unless Jordan is publicly committed to the recognition of Israel and to negotiate promptly and directly with Israel under the basic tenets of United Nations Security Council Resolutions 242 and 338.]

[(b) CERTIFICATION.—Any notification made pursuant to section 36(b) of the Arms Export Control Act with respect to a proposed sale to Jordan of United States advanced aircraft, new air defense systems or other new advanced military weapons, must be accompanied by a Presidential certification of Jordan's public commitment to the recognition of Israel and to negotiate promptly and directly with Israel under the basic tenets of United Nations Security Council Resolutions 242 and 338.]

Sec. [546] 528. None of the funds appropriated or made available pursuant to this Act shall be available to a private voluntary organization which fails to provide upon timely request any document, file, or record necessary to the auditing requirements of the Agency for International Development.

[Sec. 547. Of the amounts made available by this Act for military assistance and financing for El Salvador under chapters 2 and 5 of part II of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 and under the Arms Export Control Act, $5,000,000 may not be expended until the President reports, following the conclusion of the Appeals process in the case of Captain Avila, to the Committees on Appropriations that the Government of El Salvador has (1) substantially concluded all investigative action with respect to those responsible for the January 1981 deaths of the two United States land reform consultants Michael Hammer and Mark Pearlman and the Salvadoran Land Reform Institute Director Jose Rodolfo Viera, and (2) pursued all legal avenues to bring to trial and obtain a verdict of those who ordered and carried out the January 1981 murders.]

[SEC. 548. It is the sense of the Congress that all countries receiving United States foreign assistance under the "Economic Support Fund", "Foreign Military Credit Sales", "Military Assistance" program, "International Military Education and Training", Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 (Public Law 480) development assistance programs, or trade promotion programs should fully cooperate with the international refugee assistance organizations, the United States, and other governments in facilitating lasting solutions to refugee situations. Further, where resettlement to other countries is the appropriate solution, such resettlement should be expedited in cooperation with the country of asylum without respect to race, sex, religion, or national origin.]

[SEC. 549. Any joint resolution introduced on or after February 1, 1986, which states that the Congress objects to the proposed sale to Jordan of advanced weapons systems, including advanced aircraft and advanced air defense systems (submitted to the Congress on October 21, 1985), shall be considered in the Senate in accordance with the provisions of section 601(b) of the International Security Assistance and Arms Export Control Act of 1976.]

[SEC. 550. (a) The Congress finds that—

(1) the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) reports that four million children die annually because they have not been immunized against the six major childhood diseases: polio, measles, whooping cough, diptheria, tetanus, and tuberculosis;

(2) at present less than 20 percent of children in the developing world are fully immunized against these diseases;

(3) each year more than five million additional children are permanently disabled and suffer diminished capacities to contribute to the economic, social, and political development of their countries because they have not been immunized;

(4) ten million additional childhood deaths from immunizable and potentially immunizable diseases could be averted annually by the development of techniques in biotechnology for new and cost-effective vaccines;

(5) the World Health Assembly, the Executive Board of the United Nations Children's Fund, and the United Nations General Assembly are calling upon the nations of the world to commit the resources necessary to meet the challenge of universal access to childhood immunization by 1990;

(6) the United States, through the Centers for Disease Control and the Agency for International Development, joined in a global effort by providing political and technical leadership that made possible the eradication of smallpox during the 1970's;

(7) the development of national immunization systems that can both be sustained and also serve as a model for a wide range of primary health care actions is a desired outcome of our foreign assistance policy;

(8) The United States Centers for Disease Control headquartered in Atlanta is uniquely qualified to provide technical assistance for a worldwide immunization and eradication effort and is universally respected;

(9) at the 1984 Bellagio Conference it was determined that the goal of universal childhood immunization by 1990 is indeed achievable;

(10) the Congress, through authorizations and appropriations for international health research and primary health care activities and the establishment of the Child Survival Fund, has played a vital role in providing for the well-being of the world's children;

(11) the Congress has expressed its expectation that the Agency for International Development will set as a goal the immunization by 1990 of at least 80 percent of all the children in those countries in which the Agency has a program; and

(12) the United States private sector and public at large have responded generously to appeals for support for national immunization campaigns in developing countries.]

[(b)(1) The Congress calls upon the President to direct the Agency for International Development, working through the Centers for Disease Control and other appropriate Federal agencies, to work in a global effort to provide enhanced support toward achieving the goal of universal access to childhood immunization by 1990 by—

(A) assisting in the delivery, distribution, and use of vaccines, including—

(i) the building of locally sustainable systems and technical capacities in developing countries to reach, by the appropriate age, not less than 80 per centum of their annually projected target population with the full schedule of required immunizations, and

(ii) the development of a sufficient network of indigenous professionals and institutions with responsibility for developing, monitoring, and assessing immunization programs and continually adapting strategies to reach the goal of preventing immunizable diseases; and

(B) performing, supporting, and encouraging research and development activities, both in the public and private sector, that will be targeted at developing new vaccines and at modifying and improving existing vaccines to make them more appropriate for use in developing countries.

(2) In support of this global effort, the President should appeal to the people of the United States and the United States private sector to support public and private efforts to provide the resources necessary to achieve universal access to childhood immunization by 1990.]

[SEC. 551. The foreign debt burdens of many Third World nations have contributed to their economic decline and inability to engage in a significant economic recovery;

The United States foreign military assistance loan programs, which have had very high interest rates in past years, have contributed to the security of our friends and allies, but also have played a contributing role in adding to the debt burdens of many of our friends and allies;

United States foreign aid has, among its major objectives, the enhancement of the military and economic security of our friends and allies and our own security;

A foreign assistance program which adds significantly to the debt burdens of our friends and allies by forcing the weaker of those nations to use funds which could be used for development for repayment of loans impairs their economic development unnecessarily and is not in either their or our interest;

The past few years have seen several positive legislative steps taken to alleviate the FMS loan-related debt burdens of our friends and allies by reducing interest rates, stretching out the repayment period of these loans, and by increasing the level of MAP grants and forgiven FMS credits;

These steps have helped to ease these problems in the short term, but the long-term debt servicing problems of our friends and allies remain;

It would be in the best interests of our friends and allies to alleviate their debt burdens brought about by past loans and to bring about a more streamlined and straightforward approach to their programs in this area;

Such streamlined, straightforward programs would make it easier to develop country programs and would ease current pressures on the United States to grant to aid recipients the most favorable terms on their military loan programs: Now therefore

(1) it is the sense of the Congress that a more simplified, streamlined, straightforward foreign military assistance program is in the national interest and in the interest of the military and economic security of our friends and allies throughout the world;

(2) that greater concessionality only to match economic need as appropriate should be incorporated into future military assistance programs;

(3) that FMS loan programs extending the repayment period beyond the useful life of the items to be purchased could tend to increase the long-term debt burdens of our friends and allies;

(4) that the FMS concessional loan program contains a significant grant element to the recipient nation and that the Congress should actively consider replacing this program with a more straightforward approach;

(5) the President is urged to propose, in the next formal Congressional Presentation for Security Assistance Programs, reforms and refinements in the foreign military assistance programs along these lines for consideration by the appropriate committees of the Congress.]

[SEC. 552. (a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the President is authorized—

(1) to deny nondiscriminatory (most-favored-nation) trade treatment to the products of Afghanistan and thereby cause such products to be subject to the rate of duty set forth in column number 2 of the Tariff Schedules of the United States, and

(2) to deny credit, credit guarantees, and investment guarantees to, or for the benefit of, Afghanistan under any Federal program.

(b) If the President has not denied nondiscriminatory trade treatment to the products of Afghanistan before the date that is 45 days after the date of enactment of this joint resolution, the President shall submit to the Congress on such date.] (Foreign Assistance and Related Programs Appropriations Act, 1986, as included in Public Law 99-190.)

The Agricultural Research Service conducts research to provide the means for a safer, more economical, and more abundant supply of agricultural products for the Nation. The Service uses coordinated, interdisciplinary approaches to perform basic and applied research on soil and water conservation, plant and animal productivity, commodity conversion and delivery, human nutrition, and integrated agricultural systems. The 1987 budget proposes to increase efforts in germplasm and biotechnology research to improve the profitability and competitiveness of U.S. agriculture.

Research on soil and water conservation.—Research is conducted to improve soil and water management, irrigation, and conservation practices; to protect natural resources from harmful effects of soil, air, and water pollutants and to minimize certain agricultural pollution problems; and to determine the relation of soil types and water to plant, animal, and human nutrition.

Research on plant productivity.—Research is conducted to increase plant productivity by improving plant varieties; developing new crop resources; and improving crop production practices, including methods to control plant diseases, nematodes, insects, and weeds. The program increases proposed for 1987 are for gene transfer and germplasm enhancement and evaluation.

Research on animal productivity.—Research is conducted to increase livestock productivity (including poultry) through improved breeding, feeding, and management practices, and to develop methods for controlling diseases, parasites, and insect pests affecting these animals.

Research on commodity conversion and delivery.—Research is conducted to develop new and improved foods, feeds, products, and processes for agricultural commodities; and to improve the processing, transportation, storage, wholesaling, and retailing of products. Research is also conducted on problems of human health and safety, including means to insure the safety of food and feed supplies; control insect pests of man and his belongings; and reduce the hazards to human life resulting from pesticide residues and other causes. The program increases proposed for 1987 are for developing new and value-added products and to reduce agricultural losses and barriers to improve commodity exports.

Human nutrition research.—Research is conducted on subjects as human nutritional requirements and the composition and nutritive value of foods, to promote optimum human health through improved nutrition.

Integration of agricultural systems.—Research is conducted to develop integrated systems for efficiently producing, processing, and marketing agricultural products; and to develop alternative agricultural systems, that are less dependent upon nonrenewable resources and that are productive, efficient, and sustainable in the long term.

Repair and maintenance of facilities.—Funds are used to restore, upgrade, and maintain Federal facilities to meet OSHA and EPA requirements, provide suitable workspace for in-house research programs, and to retrofit existing structures for better energy utilization.

Contingencies.—Funds available to meet urgent needs that develop unexpectedly during the year when such needs cannot be met by redirection of resources from other projects.

Construction of facilities.—Unobligated balances will be used for this purpose.

Advances and reimbursements.—Agricultural Research Service performs program research activities and services for other USDA, Federal, and non-Federal agencies. These activities and services are paid for on a reimbursable basis.

Cooperative State Research Service participates in a nationwide system of agricultural research program planning and coordination between the State institutions and the U.S. Department of Agriculture. It assists in maintaining cooperation among the State institutions, and between the State institutions and their Federal research partners. The Agency administers grants and payments to State institutions to supplement State and local funding for agricultural research.

Payments under the Hatch Act.—Funds under the Hatch Act are allocated on a formula basis to agricultural experiment stations of the land-grant colleges in the 50 States, District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam, the Virgin Islands, and American Samoa.

Cooperative forestry research.—These funds are allocated by formula to land-grant colleges or agricultural experiment stations in the 50 States, Puerto Rico, Guam, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, and other State-supported colleges and universities offering graduate training in the sciences basic to forestry and having a forestry school.

Payments to 1890 colleges and Tuskegee University.—Funds support agricultural research at the 1890 land-grant colleges, including Tuskegee University.

Special research grants.—These grants are targeted to localized problems. No funding is proposed in 1987.

Competitive research grants.—Research scientists throughout the U.S. scientific community compete for funding under this program. These grants support basic research in biotechnology, plant and animal science, pest science, and human nutrition.

Animal health and disease research.—Funds, distributed by formula, support livestock and poultry disease research in colleges of veterinary medicine and in eligible agricultural experiment stations. No funding is proposed in 1987.

Federal administration.—A coordinating and review staff assists in maintaining cooperation within and among the States, and between the States and their Federal research partners. This staff also administers research grants and payments to States. Federal administration is funded from a combination of program set-asides from formula and grant programs and from direct appropriation for administration.

1890 research facilities.—Funds support the purchase of land and the construction, alteration or renovation of buildings necessary for the conduct of food and agricultural research at colleges eligible to receive funds under the second Morrill Act of 1890, including Tuskegee University.

Higher Education.—Funding is proposed for Strengthening Grants to support resident instruction at the 1890 colleges, the Tuskegee University, and the University of the District of Columbia. The Morrill-Nelson and graduate training grants programs receive no funding in 1987.

Forestry competitive grants.—This program emphasizes basic research in the areas of harvesting, wood utilization and forest biology. No funding is proposed in 1987.

Reimbursable program.—Funds support basic and applied agriculture research and activities performed for other USDA, Federal, and non-Federal agencies.

The Federal Extension Service, States, and localities comprise the Cooperative Extension System. This nationwide system provides out-of-school, applied education in agriculture, home economics, community development, and 4-H youth programs.

Federal funds are distributed primarily by formula to States, Puerto Rico, Guam, the Virgin Islands, Micronesia, and American Samoa, primarily on the basis of population. The 1987 budget includes Federal funding to address high priority issues through the established Extension System. These priorities include (1) assistance to farmers in financial stress, (2) education and analytical support to assist farmers in adjusting to newly authorized farm programs, (3) assistance in addressing groundwater quality and other natural resource conservation issues, and (4) other types of assistance to rural areas. All earmarked programs are proposed for elimination.

In fiscal year 1987, continued Federal support is proposed for the Land-Grant Institutions, the 1890 Institutions and Tuskegee University and the District of Columbia.

Agricultural information and library services.—The National Agricultural Library provides a variety of information products and services through: (1) the administration of a unique collection of books, journals, and other information materials about food and agriculture to assure accessibility to their contents; (2) the development and maintenance of cooperative efforts in the library and related information areas, with other Federal agencies and with educational institutions in each State; (3) an active program of information dissemination. The funds in 1987 will be used to continue NAL's services and cooperative efforts with other libraries.

Repairs and maintenance of facilities.—These funds are used for maintaining the library building.

Crop and livestock estimates.—The Service provides the official National and State estimates of acreage, yield, and production of crops, stocks and value of farm commodities, and numbers of inventory values of livestock items. Data on approximately 120 crops and 45 livestock products are covered in some 300 reports issued each year. Data collected and published on prices paid and received by farmers are basic to computation of parity prices.

The work under this activity is conducted through 44 State offices serving the 50 States; most of these offices are operated as joint State and Federal services. Cooperative arrangements with State agencies provide additional State and county data. Major program modifications in 1987 include: An increase of $450,000 to provide improved quality on the acreage intentions, mid-year acreage, monthly crop reports, and end-of-year crop acreage and production surveys by using probability procedures; an increase of $150,000 to improve Crop Reporting Board procedures; and a decrease of $50,000 to reduce the frequency of reports on prices paid for building materials and marketing containers.

Statistical research and service.—This activity is designed to improve crop and livestock estimating techniques by improving sample survey designs and procedures and by testing new forecasting and estimating techniques, such as the use of satellite data.

The World Agricultural Outlook Board (WAOB) was established to provide a single focal point for the Nation's economic intelligence related to domestic and international food and agriculture.

The objectives of the WAOB are to improve the consistency, objectivity, and reliability of outlook and situation material being disseminated to the public and to integrate and coordinate USDA domestic and international economic information assistance.

The WAOB carries out these objectives through daily market surveillance and special analyses of international and domestic agricultural developments, direct participation in the planning of research programs supporting outlook and situation activities, and coordination of all departmental activities relating to weather and climate and remote sensing.

The 1987 budget includes funds for global weather monitoring and analysis and eliminates funds for LANDSAT.

The Foreign Agricultural Service mission is to help American farmers and traders take maximum advantage of increased opportunities to sell U.S. agricultural commodities abroad and to help increase U.S. farm income.

Activities are conducted within four program areas:

Foreign agricultural affairs.—The Service maintains agricultural counselors, attachés or trade officers at 76 foreign posts to assist overseas development of markets for U.S. farm commodities. They work closely with numerous U.S. agricultural trade groups and maintain significant contacts with foreign governments and traders to promote market access for U.S. farm products. They also file annually about 4,000 comprehensive reports regarding foreign agricultural production, supply, demand, marketing and trade policy developments to keep U.S. agriculture, industry, and Government currently informed.

PROGRAM STATISTICS

Number of countries covered	110	110	110
Number of trade and Government visitors	24,800	25,000	25,500

Foreign market information and access.—This program forges a link between the Foreign Agricultural Affairs program and the agency's analytical/informational and market development planning/services functions that serve the U.S. agricultural community and Government decisionmakers. The analysis and timely release of periodicals on world commodity conditions allow U.S. farm and trade groups to have ready access to information that can be used as reliable sources to assess short-term changes in world agricultural supply conditions by commodity.

The analyses of world commodity conditions provide the information necessary to develop export marketing strategies that can be used by the Department not only to gain market access but to enhance the long term market development plans for major U.S. commodities.

Foreign market development.—This program provides funding support to 47 commodity associations (cooperators), 16 contractors participating in the export incentive program, 24 private firms participating in the Value-Added Product Promotion Program, 4 regional groups (representing 47 State departments of agriculture) and the National Association of State Departments of Agriculture. Under FAS guidance and supervision, these organizations conduct an extensive worldwide market development program on behalf of the U.S. farm sector. In addition, the Service develops and operates a worldwide system of multicommodity promotional programs utilizing product exhibits, trade teams, trade services, market information programs, and trade referral services to expand overseas markets. Historically, FAS contributes approximately 30 percent of the total annual cost of this program. In 1987, the FAS contribution will be decreased to 25 percent.

PROGRAM STATISTICS

Number of commodity associations and firms actively working with FAS	64	61	60
Number of agricultural trade offices (ATO)	14	15	15
Number of countries covered by ATO's	32	33	33
Number of visitors to ATO's	6,620	7,000	8,000

LANDSAT data.—In 1986, FAS discontinued purchase of LANDSAT remote sensing data from the direct appropriation. LANDSAT imagery used to cover the Soviet Union is now purchased from funds made available by the Commodity Credit Corporation.

The mission of the Office of International Cooperation and Development (OICD) is to promote U.S. agriculture and to advance the agriculture of developing countries as parts of a complementary global agricultural system capable of providing ample food and fiber for all people.

International agricultural development.—OICD analyzes agricultural policy issues related to USDA's international agricultural development efforts, and supports the Cancun Presidential Agricultural Task Forces, the International Science and Education Council, and the agriculture information center. The Agency also formulates and reviews food aid development activities supported by Public Law 480 Titles I and III agreements.

International scientific and technical cooperation.—OICD manages the Department's bilateral exchange and cooperative research programs with foreign governments and institutions in order to strengthen the role of science and technology in the ongoing effort to stabilize world food supplies and to increase the efficiency with which world resources are used. Priorities and criteria for these programs are based on domestic research priorities, potential benefits to U.S. agricultural production, and the availability of desired technologies. OICD coordinates USDA's and the U.S. Government's participation in approximately 30 international organizations concerned with food, agriculture and rural development.

Reimbursable program.—OICD, utilizing USDA and university expertise, provides technical assistance and training to developing countries at the request of AID and international organizations. OICD manages technical assistance projects in over 50 countries, focusing on land and water management, crop and livestock production and marketing, forestry, pest control, resource conservation and other areas. OICD offers a technical and management training program in agriculture and rural development to participants from foreign countries and designees of international organizations.

Financing the sale of agricultural commodities for foreign currencies, for dollars on credit terms, for convertible foreign currency for use under section 108; and furnishing commodities to carry out the Food for Progress Act of 1985 (titles I and III).—The Corporation finances all sales made pursuant to agreements concluded under the authority of title I, and may serve as the purchasing or shipping agent, or both, if the purchaser so requests. Sales are made to friendly countries—as defined in section 103(d) of the act—and must not displace expected commercial sales for cash dollars (secs. 103 (c) and (n)).

Agreements may not be made under title I in any calendar year which call for an appropriation to reimburse the Corporation in excess of $1.9 billion, plus unused prior years' authorizations.

Whenever practicable, terms of agreements must require payment at time of delivery of not less than 5% of the purchase price in dollars or in currencies convertible to dollars. These initial payments are applied against costs to reduce appropriation requests.

When U.S.-flag vessels are required to ship commodities under this title, the Corporation will pay the differential between U.S.-flag rates and foreign-flag rates. In limited cases, full transportation costs to port of entry or point of entry abroad may be included along with the cost of the commodity in the amount financed by CCC in order to ensure that U.S. food aid would reach the most needy recipients.

Use of foreign currency (title I).—Certain U.S. uses of foreign currencies are subject to the appropriation process. The Corporation is reimbursed for the dollar value of currencies so used. Proceeds from sales of foreign currencies and from dollar repayments of foreign currency loans are applied as a reduction in appropriation requests.

Financing sales of agricultural commodities for dollars or convertible foreign currencies on credit terms (title I).—Agreements are made with friendly countries for delivery in annual installments for not more than 10 years from the date of the agreement subject to the availability of the commodity.

Credit terms are to be no less favorable than those required by section 122 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, for loans made under that section.

Repayments under dollar credit agreements are not more than 20 years with a grace period of not more than 2 years on repayment of principal. Convertible foreign currency terms permit repayment of up to 40 years with deferral of principal payments for up to 10 years. As payments are received each year, they are applied against current costs to reduce appropriation requests.

Financing sales of agricultural commodities for convertible foreign currencies to be used pursuant to section 108 (title I).—Title I sales may be financed for convertible foreign currencies which are then loaned to financial intermediaries in the recipient country pursuant to agreements whereby the intermediaries would reloan the funds to promote private enterprise institutions. Funds repaid by the financial intermediaries may be used to finance additional private enterprise investment, develop new markets, pay U.S. obligations, or be converted to dollars.

Furnishing commodities to carry out the Food for Progress Act of 1985 (title I).—Funds appropriated to carry out title I may be used to furnish commodities to carry out the Food for Progress Act of 1985. Such commodities may be furnished on credit terms or on a grant basis in order to assist countries that have made a commitment to introduce and expand free enterprise elements in their agricultural economies.

Total title I agreements made since inception to September 30, 1985, amount to $15,177.4 million cost value, including ocean freight for shipment on U.S. ships. Major commodities are wheat, cotton, oils, rice, and feed grains. Payments received during the period amount to $3,821.4 million, of which $2,364.7 million was applied to principal and $1,456.7 million to interest.

Commodities supplied in connection with dispositions abroad (title II).—Under title II, agricultural commodities are furnished to developing countries to meet famine or other emergency relief needs and to combat malnutrition. They are furnished through friendly governments, private voluntary agencies, foreign nonprofit voluntary agencies if no such U.S. agency is available, and intergovernmental organizations such as the United Nations World Food Program.

The Corporation is authorized to pay the costs of acquisition, packaging, processing, enrichment, preservation, fortification, transportation, handling, and other incidental costs incurred up to the time of delivery to U.S. ports. The Corporation also pays ocean freight charges, and pays transportation costs to points of entry other than ports in the case of landlocked countries, where carriers to a specific country are unavailable, where ports cannot be used effectively, or where a substantial saving in costs or time can be obtained, and pays general average contributions arising from ocean transport. In addition, transportation costs from designated points of entry or ports of entry abroad to storage and distribution sites and associated storage and distribution costs may be paid for commodities made available to meet urgent and extraordinary relief requirements.

Up to $7.5 million each year may be used to buy foreign currencies accruing under title I of this act to meet costs directed to community and other self-help activities designed to alleviate the causes of the need for such aid. Such costs may not include personnel and administrative costs of cooperating sponsors, distributing agencies and recipient agencies.

Through December 31, 1985, appropriations totaling $16,850 million were authorized. Beginning October 1, 1985, no programs of assistance shall be undertaken under this title during any fiscal year which call for an appropriation of more than $1 billion to reimburse the Corporation. This limitation applies to costs incurred, including its investment in commodities (but only on the basis of a price not greater than the export market price of commodities acquired under a price support program), plus any amount by which programs of assistance undertaken under this title in the preceding fiscal year have called or will call for appropriations in amounts less than authorized during the preceding year. This limitation may be waived if the President determines that a waiver is necessary to undertake programs to meet urgent humanitarian needs. Any incidental sales proceeds and proceeds from loss, damage, and other claims are applied against costs to reflect a reduction in appropriation requests.

This account includes funds to cover expenses of programs administered by, and functions assigned to, the Service. The funds consist of transfers from the Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC), user fees, and miscellaneous advances from other sources. This is a consolidated account for administrative expenses of national, commodity, State, and county offices.

Program formulation and appraisal.—The supply adjustment, conservation, and commodity support programs, and the management and merchandising of commodities acquired under the support program, have a tremendous impact on the national and (to a lesser extent) the international economy. This activity provides for constant review of the effectiveness of these programs. It also provides for the analysis of data to formulate more effective programs.

Operation of supply adjustment, conservation, and price support programs.—This activity includes all functions dealing with the administration of programs carried out through the farmer committee system, including: (a) developing program regulations and procedures; (b) holding meetings with employees and producers to discuss new programs or changes in existing programs; (c) collecting and compiling basic data for individual farms; (d) establishing individual farm allotments, bases, and yields; (e) notifying producers of established allotments, bases, and yields; (f) determining farm marketing quotas; (g) handling appeals; (h) conducting referendums and certifying results; (i) accepting farmer certifications and checking compliance; (j) accepting producer applications for participation in commodity price stabilizing programs; (k) issuing marketing cards so that production from the allotted acreage can be marketed without penalty; (l) processing producer requests for conservation cost-sharing; (m) processing commodity loan and storage facility loan documents and issuing checks; (n) processing deficiency and diversion payments and issuing checks; and (o) monitoring payment limitations.

Inventory management and merchandising.—This activity includes: (a) overall management of CCC-owned commodities; (b) selling commodities; (c) donating commodities; and (d) accounting for loans and commodities.

Warehouse examination.—This activity provides for the examination of warehouses licensed under the U.S. Warehouse Act and non-licensed warehouses storing CCC-owned or pledged commodities. ASCS examiners perform periodic examinations of the facilities and the warehouse records to ensure protection of depositors against potential losses of the stored commodities and to ensure compliance with the U.S. Warehouse Act and any CCC storage agreements.

Automated data processing.—ASCS is continuing to implement the major new ADP and communications system in support of CCC operations which began nearly four years ago. Tests were conducted using prototype ADP equipment in county offices. A cost benefit analysis was completed showing significant savings and increased productivity from using automated equipment. All offices in three States were equipped and the operational concepts and implementation plans were validated. Nationwide automation of State and county offices is currently underway and equipment installation will be completed by September 1986. This effort is an integral part of a broader Information Resources Management Plan. Another major facet of the plan is the establishment of a joint ASCS–FAS data base, which includes information on local production of, and foreign demand for, agricultural commodities. Equipment purchases for these new systems will represent capital investment under the statutory authority of the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act.

The fiscal year 1987 budget for salaries and expenses reflects the impact of the 1985 Farm Bill, including a conservation reserve program authorized by that legislation, and the impact of zero funding for regular ASCS conservation programs. The budget also includes for fiscal year 1987 the establishment of service fees to partly support administrative funding for ASCS. Fees would be tied to functions performed in county offices that result in direct producer benefits such as loans and payments. The administrative impact of the 1985 Farm

This experimental Rural Clean Water Program (RCWP), authorized by the Appropriation Acts of 1980 (Public Law 96-108) and 1981 (Public Law 96-528), is a cooperative endeavor among farmers, various USDA agencies and other organizations to develop and test means of controlling agricultural nonpoint source water pollution in rural areas.

Recommended project areas were developed by local and State committees and approved by the Secretary of Agriculture in consultation with the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency. Full funding has been provided for all approved projects.

Under this program indemnification payments are made to dairy farmers and manufacturers of dairy products.

The Dairy Indemnity Program was authorized under 78 Stat. 508 in 1964, and has been extended through September 30, 1990, by the Food Security Act of 1985 (Public Law 99-198). Payments are made to farmers who are directed to remove their milk from commercial markets because the milk contains residues of chemicals which have been registered and approved for use by the Federal Government, of other chemicals, of nuclear radiation, or of nuclear fallout. The authority also provides that indemnification may be paid for cows producing such milk.

The 1987 budget proposes to terminate this program.

This program was authorized by the Cooperative Forestry Assistance Act of 1978 (16 U.S.C. 2101). The objectives of the program are to bring private nonindustrial forest land under intensified management, to increase timber production, to assure adequate supplies of timber products, and to enhance other forest resources.

The Forestry Incentives Program shares up to 65 percent of the cost of tree planting and timberstand improvement. The percentage cost-shared depends on the rate set in a particular State and county by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation (ASC) Committee, after consulting with the State forester. The program is available in designated counties based on a Forest Service survey of total eligible private timberland available for production of timber products. The program is administered by ASCS with technical assistance from Forest Service.

Under the 1986 program, cost-sharing will be provided to farmers for planting trees on 170,600 acres and improving the timberstand on 43,600 acres of forest.

The fiscal year 1987 Budget proposes to terminate this program effective February 1, 1986.

This appropriation finances the administrative and operating expenses of the Corporation to provide funds to establish and maintain rates and coverages for 19,200 county programs in over 3,000 counties and to continue development of sales policies. Crop insurance in force is estimated to increase from $8.4 billion in crop year 1986 to $9.8 billion in crop year 1987, and the estimated insured acres are expected to increase from 58.6 million in crop year 1986 to 68.6 million in crop year 1987.

The Corporation's long-term objective is to oversee the private delivery of crop insurance on an actuarially sound basis, develop actuarial rates for use by private insurance companies, and perform compliance activities.

For fiscal year 1987, the appropriation for administrative and operating expenses will enable the Corporation to provide for growth in the expanded crop insurance program to an estimated 25 percent farmers' participation, bringing the program closer to attaining its long-term objective. The 1987 appropriation is the first year of a 5-year phase-out of all Federal operating subsidies. The objective is to fully privatize the delivery of crop insurance by 1991.

The major portion of administrative and operating expenses is to support delivery systems which rely heavily on the private sector as provided by the Federal Crop Insurance Act of 1980 under section 507(c).

The delivery systems are:

Reinsured companies which enable insurance companies to provide the insurance marketing, distribution, servicing, training, quality control, and loss adjustment functions. The companies also share with Federal Crop Insurance Corporation, to a limited extent, in both profits and losses. It is estimated that reinsured companies will handle over 98 percent of the total premium during crop year 1987. For crop year 1986, approximately 50 companies or groups will be writing crop insurance with reinsurance from FCIC: and Agency sales and service agreement, also known as the "master marketing agreement." Under this type of agreement, private insurance companies and associations are offered the opportunity to contract with FCIC to provide insurance sales and services. They are compensated on a commission basis. It is estimated that these agreements will account for less than 2 percent of the total premium for crop year 1987.

In addition, in areas where an adequate private sales and service force is not available, FCIC may ask other USDA agencies to sell and service all-risk crop insurance through existing county offices.

As the private sector becomes more involved in the all-risk crop insurance program, it is expected that the companies will be able to "risk" more of their funds thus reducing the cost to the Government and at the same time reach the Corporation's goal of having all-risk crop insurance available to as many farm producers as possible.

The 1987 estimate includes savings from consolidation of administrative support services as part of 1987 budget management reforms.

The Federal Crop Insurance Corporation, a wholly owned Government corporation, was created on February 16, 1938 (7 U.S.C. 1501-1520), to carry out the provisions of the Federal Crop Insurance Act, as amended. The purpose of this act is to promote the national welfare by improving the economic stability of agriculture through a sound system of crop insurance, and to provide the means for the research and experience helpful in devising and establishing such insurance.

Crop insurance offered to agricultural producers by the Corporation provides protection from losses caused by natural hazards, such as insect and wildlife damage, plant diseases, fire, drought, flood, wind, and other weather conditions. It does not indemnify producers for losses resulting from negligence or failure to observe good farming practices.

The crop insurance programs are planned, developed, and monitored by the FCIC headquarters office located in Washington, DC and its national operations office located in Kansas City, MO. The program is administered in the field through 18 field operations offices and 11 field actuarial offices. Sales and servicing of contracts at the county level are performed primarily by agents operating under agency sales and service agreements (master marketing agreements) and agents of reinsured companies. In those areas where these delivery systems are not in place, other USDA agencies may be used to market and service the program. The adjustment of losses is performed by FCIC employees, adjusters under contract with FCIC, and reinsured companies under contract with FCIC. Also, as required, ASCS will perform some loss adjustment support on a reimbursable basis for the Corporation. Detailed administrative accounting is performed by the National Finance Center in New Orleans, LA, and program accounting and statistical functions, as well as the underwriting and actuarial analysis work, are performed in Kansas City, MO.

Budget program.—The program for 1987 (crop year 1986) will provide crop insurance protection to farmers amounting to approximately $8.4 billion on the following commodities: Almonds, apples, barley, beans, citrus, citrus trees, combined crop, corn, cotton, ELS cotton, cranberries, flax, forage production, forage seeding, grain sorghum, canning peaches, grapes, table grapes, hybrid seeding, oats, peaches, peanuts, peas (dry and green), peppers, popcorn, potatoes, prevented planting, prunes, raisins, rice, rye, soybeans, sugar beets, sugarcane, sunflowers, sweet corn, sweet corn (fresh), tobacco, tomatoes (fresh), tomatoes (processing), walnuts, and wheat. The program for 1987 is the first year of a five-year phase-out of all Federal premium subsidies. The objective is to fully privatize the delivery of crop insurance by 1991.

The 1986 appropriation provides sufficient funding for crop year 1986 to insure 58.6 million acres with an estimated $500.3 million in total premium income, including $134.2 million in premium subsidy.

The following table compares the scope of the insurance operations planned for 1986 and 1987, as compared with 1985. Amounts in the 1985 column are actual, and pertain to the 1984 crop year. The 1986 column pertains to the 1985 crop year, and reflects levels of participation that can be achieved with the 1986 appropriations. The 1987 column pertains to the 1986 crop year.

Financing.—The Corporation is authorized under the Federal Crop Insurance Act, as amended, to use funds from the issuance of capital stock which provides working capital for the Corporation.

Receipts which are for deposit to this fund come mainly from premiums paid by farmers. The principal payments from this fund are for indemnities to insured farmers, the direct cost of adjusting crop losses and agents' commissions. However, an appropriation will be requested in subsequent years for payments made from premium income used for loss adjustment costs and/or agents' commissions as provided by section 516(a) of the Federal Crop Insurance Act, as amended.

Premium subsidies are authorized by section 508(b) of the Federal Crop Insurance Act, as amended. The purpose of the subsidy is to encourage the broadest possible participation of farm producers in the crop insurance program. Subsidies are paid by the Corporation based upon 30 percent of each producer's premium (reduced, where applicable, for hail and fire exclusion or State agency subsidy) on any coverage, under the Corporation's policy of insurance of up to a maximum of 65 percent of the recorded or appraised average yield, as adjusted.

In fiscal year 1985, the Corporation borrowed $113 million from Treasury in order to pay heavy crop years 1984 and 1985 losses.

[1] The 1986 level of obligations ($16,529,584 thousand) reflects direct loans for fiscal year 1986 (which includes 1985 and 1986 crop years). The direct loan level for the 1986 crop year estimated to be $15,000,000 thousand is subject to sequestration under P.L. 99-177. The post sequestration loan level constitutes a de facto limitation.

[2] This entry includes commodities received as the result of loan forfeitures valued at $1.6, $4.1, and $5.1 billion for fiscal years 1985 through 1987, respectively. It also includes non-receipt of loan repayments for marketing loans and adjustments for loans to peanut associations.

[3] Reflects $1,142,524 thousand in adjustments to outstanding balance of rescheduled loans not previously included in this schedule.

The Corporation was created to stabilize, support, and protect farm income and prices, to help maintain balanced and adequate supplies of agricultural commodities, their products, foods, feeds, and fibers, and to help in their orderly distribution (15 U.S.C. 714-714p). It may make available materials and facilities required in connection with the production and marketing of agricultural commodities and may be used to administer and to temporarily finance numerous special activities.

The Corporation's capital stock of $100 million is held by the United States. Under present law, up to $25 billion may be borrowed from the U.S. Treasury to finance operations.

The 1987 estimate includes savings from improving the control and timing of disbursements and handling of cash collections as part of continuing budget management reforms. Permanent indefinite appropriation authority is requested to cover all net realized losses. The 1986 estimates include $7.95 billion in additional authority as a result of high crop production and new programs under the 1985 Farm Bill. Appropriations to CCC for net realized losses have no effect on budget authority.

Budget assumptions.—The following general assumptions form the basis for the Corporation's 1986 and 1987 budget estimates: (a) National income will rise both in 1986 and 1987 from the present level; (b) 1986 crop production will fall from 1985 crop levels; (c) generally, exports of agricultural commodities in 1987 are expected to be slightly higher than 1986 levels; (d) yields for the 1986 crops are based on recent averages adjusted for trend; (e) acreage allotments and marketing quotas will be in effect for the 1986 crops of certain kinds of tobacco; (f) poundage quotas will be in effect for the 1986 crop of peanuts.

It is difficult to forecast with accuracy requirements for the year ending September 30, 1987, since the projections are subject to complex and unpredictable factors such as weather, other factors which affect the volume of production of crops not yet planted, feed and food needs here and overseas, and available dollar exchange.

PROGRAMS OF THE CORPORATION

Support and related stabilization programs.—The Corporation conducts programs to support farm income and prices and stabilize the market for agricultural commodities. Price support is provided to producers of agricultural commodities through loans, purchases, payments, and other means. This is done mainly under the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act, as amended (15 U.S.C. 714 et seq.), the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1421 et seq.), and the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1281 et seq.).

Support is mandatory for the basic commodities—corn, cotton, wheat, rice, peanuts, and tobacco. The Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, also requires support of the following nonbasic commodities: honey, milk, barley, oats, rye, grain sorghum, sugar, soybeans, and seed cotton. The National Wool Act of 1954, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1781-87), requires support for wool and mohair. Support for other nonbasic commodities is discretionary. The support program may also include operations to remove and dispose of surplus agricultural commodities in order to stabilize prices at levels not in excess of those permissible by law.

The principal methods of providing support are loans to and purchases from producers. With limited exceptions, loans made on commodities are nonrecourse. The commodities serve as collateral for the loan and on maturity the producer may deliver or forfeit such collateral to satisfy his obligation without further payment.

Direct purchases are also made from processors as well as producers, depending on the commodity involved. Also, special purchases are made under various laws for the removal of surpluses; for example, the Act of August 19, 1958, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1431 note), and section 416 of the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1431).

Deficiency payments.—Producers may receive deficiency payments in addition to Commodity Credit Corporation loans and purchases for feed grains, rice and wheat; and in addition to loans for cotton. Producers of feed grains and wheat must comply with acreage limitation provisions or acreage set-aside provisions, and normal crop acreage (NCA) requirements, if in effect, in order to be eligible for loans, purchases, and payments. Producers of cotton and rice must comply with acreage limitation provisions, if in effect, in order to be eligible for loans, purchases, and payments. The total amount of payments, excluding disaster payments, loan deficiency payments, and inventory reduction payments, which a person is entitled to receive under one or more of the annual programs for feed grains, wheat, upland cotton, ELS cotton, and rice for each of the 1986 through 1990 crops of these commodities shall not exceed $50 thousand. A portion of these payments may be paid with "in kind" commodities.

The Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, establishes minimum target prices for the 1986 through 1990 crops of the following commodities—wheat, corn, upland cotton, rice, and ELS cotton, and establishes minimum loan and purchase levels for wheat, feed grains, and rice, and establishes minimum loan levels for upland cotton and ELS cotton. Deficiency payments for each of the commodities are required when the target price for the commodity exceeds the national average market price or the loan rate, whichever is higher. The target prices for grain sorghum and oats and, if designated by the Secretary, barley, are established at a level which is fair and reasonable in relation to the target prices established for corn.

Dairy.—The Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended by the Food Security Act of 1985, provides for a revised dairy price support program. For the period beginning January 1, 1986, and ending December 31, 1986, the support price is $11.60 per hundredweight. The support price is $11.35 per hundredweight for the period January 1, 1987 through September 30, 1987. During the period October 1, 1987 through December 31, 1990, the support price will be $11.10 per hundredweight except that the Secretary will, on January 1 of calendar years 1988, 1989, and 1990, reduce the support price in effect by 50 cents per hundredweight if estimates of CCC purchases of milk or milk products for the twelve-month period beginning on such date is in excess of five billion pounds milk equivalent, if a milk production termination program is implemented for the 18-month period of April 1, 1986 through September 30, 1987 which achieves a reduction in production of at least 12 billion pounds or the Secretary certifies to Congress that reasonable contract offers were extended but that such offers were not accepted by a sufficient number of producers to achieve the 12 billion pound reduction. In addition, if the Secretary estimates on January 1 or any of the calendar years 1988, 1989, and 1990 that the level of purchases of milk and milk products by CCC for such calendar year will not exceed 2.5 billion pounds, the Secretary shall increase the support price in effect on such date by 50 cents per hundredweight. Under the production termination program, producers may submit bids for payments by CCC in return for the full termination of production by such producers. To encourage the adjustment of milk production to levels consistent with national demand, and finance the production termination program, the Secretary is required to provide for a reduction of 40 cents per hundredweight in the support price received on all milk marketed for commercial use by producers to be made during the period April 1, 1986 through December 31, 1986 and 25 cents per hundredweight for the period January 1, 1987 through September 30, 1987.

Commodity export.—The Corporation promotes the export of agricultural commodities and products through sales for dollars or foreign currency, payments, extension of credit, assumption of certain risks, and conduct of other operations with respect to the exportation of commodities. Such commodities and products may be those held in private trade channels as well as those acquired by the Corporation. These programs are carried out under the Corporation's charter and other specific legislation. The 1985 estimates include $140 million in increased revenues from increasing loan fees to 5 percent.

Foreign donations.—Under the authority of section 416(b) of the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, CCC may furnish eligible commodities for carrying out programs of assistance in developing and friendly countries and may pay costs associated with making the commodities available. Such commodities may also be used to carry out the Food for Progress Act of 1985 or furnished in connection with (i) sales under title I of the Agricultural Trade Development Act of 1954, as amended; (ii) agricultural export bonus or promotion programs; or (iii) agreements by recipient countries to acquire additional agricultural commodities from the U.S. through commercial arrangements.

Storage facilities.—Pursuant to sections 4(h) and 5(b) of the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act, the Corporation has authority to make secured loans for the purchase, construction, or remodeling of facilities for storage and care of commodities on the farm.

Supply and foreign purchase.—The Corporation can procure from domestic and foreign sources food, agricultural commodities, and products and related materials to supply the needs of Federal agencies, foreign governments, and private and international relief agencies, under section 5 (b) and (c) of the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act.

Set-aside program and acreage limitation program.—The Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, authorizes the Secretary to establish, through the Corporation, acreage limitation programs on the 1986 through 1990 crops of upland cotton, rice, and ELS cotton. In addition, the Secretary is authorized to implement a set-aside or acreage limitation program for the 1986 through 1990 crops of wheat and feed grains.

Land diversion payments.—The Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, provides that, to assist in adjusting the acreage of commodities to desirable goals, the Secretary is required, with respect to the 1986 crops of wheat and feed grains if certain stock levels exist on the first day of the marketing years for such crop, to make land diversion payments in the form of an "in-kind" payment and may, with respect to the 1987 and subsequent crops of wheat, feed grains, and the 1986 through 1990 crops of upland cotton, ELS cotton, and rice, make land diversion payments, through the Corporation, to producers who devote to approved conservation uses acreages of cropland in addition to those required to be so devoted under the acreage limitation or set-aside programs.

Conservation Reserve Program.—The Food Security Act of 1985 provides that the Secretary shall carry out a Conservation Reserve Program by entering into 10- to 15-year contracts with owners of highly erodible cropland to assist them in conserving and using the soil and water resources of their farms. Non-erodible lands which pose an off-farm environmental threat or cause productivity degradation due to soil salinity may also be included. In return for placing land in the reserve, farmers receive cost-share and rental payments, as well as technical assistance from USDA agencies. A minimum of 5 million acres in crop year 1986 and 10 million acres in crop year 1987 will be included in the reserve, and the facilities, services and funds of CCC will be used to carry out the program in these two years. A portion of these payments may be paid with "in-kind" commodities.

Grain reserves.—A producer-owned grain reserve program for wheat and feed grains provides 3-year extended loans to producers. Producers receive annual storage payments under the contract. Program provisions establish when interest is charged. Storage payments cease and producers may repay their loans when market prices reach the higher of 140 percent of the nonrecourse loan rate for the commodity or the established price for the commodity.

Operating expenses.—The Corporation carries out its functions through utilization of employees and facilities of other Government agencies. Administrative expenses are incurred for the services of: the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, General Sales Manager, and other agencies of the Department engaged in the Corporation's activities; and the General Accounting Office for audit. Additional expenses are incurred for ASCS county offices for work related to programs of the Corporation, other ASCS expenses offset by revenue, custodian, and agency expenses of the Federal Reserve banks and lending agencies, and miscellaneous costs.

Expenses are incurred for acquisition, operation, maintenance, improvement, or disposition of property which the Corporation owns or in which it has an interest. These expenses are treated as program expenses. Such program expenses include inspection, classing and grading work performed on a fee basis by Federal employees or Federal- or State-licensed inspectors; work relating to CCC programs performed on a contract or fee basis by Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service; and special services performed by other Federal agencies within and outside this Department. Most of these general expenses, including storage and handling, transportation, inspection, classing and grading and producer storage payments, are included in program costs. They are shown in the program and financing schedule in the entries entitled "Storage, transportation, and other obligations not included above," and "Producer storage payments."

The Corporation receives reimbursement for grain requisitioned pursuant to Public Law 87–152 (7 U.S.C. 447–449) by the States from Corporation stocks to feed resident wildlife threatened with starvation through the appropriation reimbursement for net realized losses. There have been no requisitions in recent years, however.

SPECIAL ACTIVITIES

These activities are carried out under authority of section 5(g) of the Corporation's charter act and specific statutory authorizations or directives with respect thereto which are currently in effect or which may subsequently be enacted.

A summary of such current activities not included under other designated activities is as follows (in thousands of dollars):

Funds of the Corporation are used to carry on this program. For the purpose of reimbursing the Corporation, section 705 of the act appropriates each fiscal year an amount equal to amounts expended by the Corporation during the preceding year and to amounts expended in prior fiscal years not previously reimbursed, but not to exceed an amount equal to 70 percent of the gross receipts from duties collected on wool and wool manufactures during the calendar year preceding the fiscal year.

FINANCING

Borrowing authority.—The Corporation has an authorized capital stock of $100 million held by the United States and authority to borrow up to $25 billion.

Funds are borrowed from Treasury and may also be borrowed from private lending agencies and others. The Corporation reserves a sufficient amount of its borrowing authority to purchase at any time all notes and other obligations evidencing loans made by such agencies and others. All bonds, notes, debentures, and similar obligations issued by the Corporation are subject to approval by the Secretary of the Treasury as required by the Act of March 8, 1938 (15 U.S.C. 713a-4).

Interest on borrowings from the Treasury (and on capital stock) is paid at a rate based upon the average interest rate of all outstanding marketable obligations (of comparable maturity date) of the United States as of the preceding month. Interest is also paid on other notes and obligations at a rate prescribed by the Commodity Credit Corporation and approved by the Secretary of Treasury.

The Department of Agriculture and Related Agencies Appropriation Act, 1966, made provision for terminating interest after June 30, 1964 on the portion of the Corporation's borrowings from the Treasury equal to the unreimbursed realized losses recorded on the books of the Corporation after the end of the fiscal year in which such losses are realized.

[1] Assumes enactment of $7,950,000,000 supplemental for reimbursement of CCC realized losses.

Note.—Accounts payable, accrued liabilities and other outstanding obligations not reflected on this table do not become charges against the statutory borrowing authority until they result in borrowings from the Treasury.

Contract authority.—Price support and other programs required by statute may result in the Corporation incurring obligations in excess of available funds and borrowing authority. Such obligations are liquidated from subsequent appropriations and other funds which may become available to the Corporation. Any increase in obligations in excess of available fund resources is reported as contract authority in the year involved; a decrease is reported as the application of appropriations and other funds to liquidate the authority.

Appropriations.—Under section 2 of Public Law 87-155 (15 U.S.C. 713a-11), annual appropriations are authorized for each fiscal year to reimburse the Corporation for net realized losses incurred as of the close of each year.

The special activities are financed as indicated in the program descriptions above. In addition to certain reimbursements from other agencies, appropriations are made for the National Wool Act (see above) and for foreign assistance programs.

The Rural Electrification Administration, under authority of the Rural Electrification Act of 1936, as amended, makes subsidized direct loans and guarantees loans made by other qualified lenders to rural electric and telephone systems for electric and telephone service in rural areas.

In order to protect the Government's loan security on over $57 billion of loans and guarantees made to borrowers, to assure that construction and operation projects conform to approved standards, REA furnishes business management and technical assistance on a regular basis to its borrowers. This objective is carried out through regulations, personal visits to the borrowers, and by training. REA has personnel in the Washington office and a field staff who have expertise in the electric or telephone industry and who are available to assist borrowers in specialized areas.

Since current and projected demand for new REA loans has declined, staff resources necessary to carry out these programs are being reduced.

This appropriation reimburses the rural electrification and telephone revolving fund for interest subsidies and losses which, by law, are not incurred by the revolving fund.

This fund has not incurred a loss since its inception in 1973, because it is exempted by the Act from paying $307 million in annual interest costs to the Treasury on advances totaling $7.9 billion. Rural electric and telephone direct loans have actually cost the Federal Government over $1.8 billion in interest subsidies and losses since 1973. However, these costs have been sustained by the Treasury, not by the revolving fund. Therefore, no appropriation is requested for 1987, and a rescission is proposed for 1986.

The Rural Electrification Act of 1936, as amended, authorizes appropriations for the purchase of Class A stock in the Rural Telephone Bank by the U.S. Government.

No appropriation is requested for 1987. The Federal Government has already provided $450 million in low-cost capital to the Bank—$140 million over the amount in the original statute establishing the Bank. Avoiding further appropriations through 1991 when the current authorization expires would save the Treasury about $30 million in interest over the next four years and about $250 million in interest for the life of these capital loans. The Bank can instead borrow from private credit markets or from the Treasury at a rate of interest equivalent to Treasury's cost of borrowing. By contrast, this appropriation would provide capital to the Bank with a 2 percent rate of return, the difference between 2 percent and Treasury's rates being borne by the U.S. taxpayer. A rescission is proposed for 1986.

The Rural Development Insurance Fund was established on October 1, 1972, pursuant to section 116 of the Rural Development Act of 1972 (Public Law 92–419) approved August 30, 1972, to make community facility and business and industrial loans and guaranteed loans to both profit and nonprofit organizations.

The Rural Communication Development Fund, an account under the Rural Development Insurance Fund authorities, was established pursuant to Secretary's Memorandum No. 1988 approved May 22, 1979. This memorandum transferred certain financing authorities under the Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act (7 U.S.C. 1921 et seq.) from the Farmers Home Administration to the Rural Electrification Administration for the purpose of financing and administering community antenna television services or facilities in rural areas. Funding is required for losses from operation of the program.

[1] Loans that are guaranteed by REA and disbursed by the Federal Bank are shown in the REA, FFB direct loan schedule. Limitations enacted or proposed on these loans are as follows: 1985, $1,325,000 thousand; 1986, $975,000 thousand; and 1987, $225,000 thousand.

The Rural Electrification Administration conducts two loan programs: (1) The rural electrification program and (2) the rural telephone program.

Direct electric and telephone loans from the Rural Electrification and Telephone Revolving Fund (RETRF) bear interest at a 5 percent rate. Some loans may be made at a lesser rate. RETRF loans must be repaid within a period not to exceed 35 years. REA also guarantees loans made directly by the Government through the Federal Financing Bank (FFB) or by other qualified lenders at rates agreed upon by the lender and the borrower.

Loans from the RETRF are financed from available receipts or, when necessary, by interim Treasury borrowings. Loans made from the RETRF are held in a pool as security for certificates of beneficial ownership (CBO's) which are sold to investors.

Rural electrification.—This loan program is financed through REA direct and guaranteed loans for the construction and operation of generating plants, electric transmission, and distribution lines or systems. Electric demand growth as well as demand for REA direct and guaranteed loans have dropped sharply over the past several years. The reduction in the 1987 loan level from 1986 reflects an expected decline in loan demand.

RURAL TELEPHONE BANK

The Rural Telephone Bank is hereby authorized to make such expenditures, within the limits of funds and borrowing authority available to such corporation in accord with law, and to make such contracts and commitments without regard to fiscal year limitations as provided by section 104 of the Government Corporation Control Act, as amended, as may be necessary in carrying out its authorized programs for the current fiscal year. During 1987, and within the resources and authority available, gross obligations for the principal amount of direct loans shall be not more than $139,000,000.

Note.—A regular 1986 appropriation for this account had not been enacted at the time this budget was prepared. A continuing resolution (Public Law 99-190) provides funds to the extent and in the manner provided for in the conference version of H.R. 3037, making appropriations for Agriculture, Rural Development, and Related Agencies, 1986.

The Rural Telephone Bank (RTB) provides a supplemental source of financing for the REA telephone loan program. The bank charges an interest rate based on the average cost of money to the bank, but not less than 5 percent per annum. The weighted average interest rate on cumulative loans through September 30, 1985, was 8.29 percent. During the first quarter of 1986, loans were made at 9.0 percent interest.

Equity capital of the bank consists of class A stock purchased by the United States, classes B and C stock purchased by bank borrowers, organizations eligible to become borrowers and organizations controlled by borrowers, and retained earnings. The maximum borrowing authority of the bank by law is limited to 20 times its paid-in capital and retained earnings. Total available borrowing authority of the bank for 1986 is estimated at $12.4 billion. For 1987, it is estimated at $13.0 billion.

Administrative support for the general operations of the bank are provided on a part-time basis by REA employees and the Office of the General Counsel, without cost to the bank, as provided for in the enabling legislation. Certain administrative expenses, such as expenses of the elected members of the Board of Directors, postage fees and the audit by the General Accounting Office, must be borne by the bank.

Bank loans totaled $168 million in 1985. After almost 13 years in operation, loans to 572 borrowers have been approved, totaling over $2.141 billion. Telephone bank loans are estimated at $185 million for 1986 and $139 million for 1987.

This grant program is authorized by subtitle A of the Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act, as amended. Grants are authorized to be made to associations, including nonprofit corporations, public and quasi-public agencies, and certain Indian tribes to finance storage, treatment, purification, or distribution of water or the collection, treatment, or disposal of waste in rural areas. The amount of any development grant may not exceed 75 percent of the eligible development cost of the project.

The major objectives of the rural water and waste disposal grant programs are: (1) to provide assistance to attain basic human amenities, (2) to alleviate health hazards, (3) to promote stability of rural areas by meeting the need for new and improved rural water and waste disposal systems, and (4) to meet national safe drinking water and clean water standards. In fiscal year 1987, communities will compete for funds for these purposes under programs provided through the Department of Housing and Urban Development's Community Development Block Grant program or receive assistance from commercial and state/local government sources.

Authority for the Agricultural Credit Insurance Fund was extended from fiscal year 1986 through 1988 by the farm bill, Public Law 99-198, signed December 23, 1985. This legislation also provided levels of funding for emergency loans. The loan levels reflected here are consistent with those established by the farm bill.

The Agricultural Credit Insurance Fund is used to insure or guarantee farm ownership, soil and water, farm operating, and emergency loans to individuals. Associations, Indian tribes and tribal corporations are eligible for the following types of loans: Indian land acquisition, watershed protection, flood prevention, and resource conservation and development.

The following loans are financed through this fund:

Farm ownership loans are made to individuals, corporations, cooperatives and partnerships, who are or will be farmers and ranchers for acquiring, enlarging, or improving not larger than family farms, including dwellings and farm buildings; for financing land and water development, use, and conservation; for developing recreational and other nonfarm enterprises; for forestry development; for refinancing indebtedness; and for loan closing costs. Loans are made for 40 years or less. Insured principal indebtedness of any borrower may not exceed $200,000 and guaranteed principal indebtedness of any borrower may not exceed $300,000. The borrower is charged not more than the cost of money interest rate for insured loans, plus up to 1 percent additional, except for low-income, limited resource borrowers who currently are charged a lower interest rate. An additional 2 percent is added to the interest rate if the loan involves the use of prime farm land for nonfarm purposes. The interest on loans that are deferred, consolidated, rescheduled or reamortized is set at the original rate or the current rate whichever is lower. The interest rate for guaranteed loans is negotiated by the lender and the borrower. No program is proposed for 1987.

Soil and water loans are made to individuals, corporations, cooperatives or partnerships, who are owners or operators of farms and ranches, for developing and conserving land and water resources. These loans may be made on farms which are larger than family farms. Loans are made for 40 years or less. Insured principal indebtedness of any borrower may not exceed $200,000 and guaranteed principal indebtedness of any borrower may not exceed $300,000. The borrower is charged not more than the cost of money interest rate for insured loans, plus up to 1 percent additional. An additional 2 percent is added to the interest rate if the loan involves the use of prime farm land for nonfarm purposes. The interest rate for guaranteed loans is negotiated by the lender and the borrower. No program is proposed for 1987.

Resource conservation and development (RCD) loans are made to local sponsors of RCD projects approved for operation by the Soil Conservation Service. Loans are made to local organizations for conservation measures specified in approved project and works of improvement plans. These loans are repayable in not more than 30 years. Loans bear interest at a rate based on the average rate paid by the U.S. Treasury on obligations of similar maturity. No program is proposed for 1987.

Watershed protection and flood prevention loans are made to local sponsors of projects approved by the Soil Conservation Service. Loans are made to local organizations for installing, repairing, or improving water storage facilities, purchasing sites or rights-of-way and for related costs. These loans are repayable in not more than 50 years at an interest rate based on the average rate paid by the U.S. Treasury on obligations of similar maturity. Total loans outstanding on any one project may not exceed $10 million. No program is proposed for fiscal year 1987.

Indian tribe land acquisition loans are made to qualified Indian tribes or tribal corporations to acquire land or interest in land within the tribe's reservation or Alaskan Indian community, as determined by the Secretary of the Interior. Loans are made for 40 years or less. The tribe is charged not more than the cost of money interest rate, plus up to 1 percent additional, except those tribes that are unable to pay the higher rate currently may be charged a lower interest rate. No program is proposed for 1987.

Farm operating loans are made to individuals, corporations, cooperatives or partnerships, who are or will be the operator of a farm or ranch, for paying costs incident to reorganizing a farming system for more profitable operation; purchasing livestock, poultry, and farm equipment; purchasing feed, seed, fertilizer, and other farm supplies; meeting other essential operating expenses; financing land and water development, use, and conservation; developing recreation and other nonfarm enterprises; providing other farm and home needs; refinancing indebtedness; complying with certain safety standards; financing modest farm and nonfarm projects for rural youths in connection with their participation in 4-H clubs, Future Farmers of America, and similar organizations; and loan closing costs.

Operating loans for farming operations are confined to operators of not larger than family farms. Individuals, partnerships, corporations, and cooperatives operating family-size farms may be eligible. The outstanding principal loan balance for operating loans to a borrower is limited to $200,000 for insured loans and $400,000 for

[1] The guaranteed loan limitation for 1985 includes $80 million of operating loans transferred from the Rural development insurance fund, $460 million transferred from the emergency disaster loan program, and $150 million of operating loans enacted in P.L. 98-396, Second Supplemental Appropriations Act, 1984 and made available through September 30, 1985.

guaranteed loans. The borrower is charged not more than the cost of money interest rate for insured loans, plus up to 1 percent additional, except for low-income, limited resource borrowers who are currently charged a lower interest rate. An additional 2 percent is added to the interest rate if the loan involves the use of prime farm land for nonfarm purposes. The interest rate on loans that are deferred, consolidated, rescheduled or reamortized is set at the original rate or the current rate, whichever is lower. The interest rate for guaranteed loans is negotiated by the lender and the borrower. The 1987 budget proposes an up front loan origination fee of 1 percent on insured loans, the same as charged on guaranteed loans. Funds advanced for operating expenses are usually repaid when the crops, livestock, or other farm products are sold. Funds advanced for other purposes may be repaid in 1 to 7 years. Loans are secured by crop and chattel liens and, when necessary, by real estate mortgages. It must be clearly established that the loan applicants are unable to obtain sufficient credit elsewhere to finance their needs. The 1987 budget proposes to maintain a $4 billion program level each year while phasing out the insured farm operating loan program by fiscal year 1989.

Emergency disaster loans are made available in designated counties and in contiguous counties where property damage and/or severe production losses have occurred as a direct result of a natural disaster.

Actual loss loans are made for physical losses to repair, restore, or replace damaged or destroyed farm property, livestock and livestock products, and supplies, and for production losses to compensate for loss of income based on reduced production of crops and/or livestock products resulting from the disaster. Repayment terms vary according to the purposes of the loan, type of collateral available to secure the loan and the projected repayment ability of the borrower. Loans for actual losses to crops, livestock, supplies, and equipment may be scheduled for repayment for up to 7 years. Under some conditions a longer repayment period may be authorized, but not to exceed 20 years. Generally, real estate will be needed as security when more than 7 years is authorized. Real estate loans will generally be scheduled for repayment within 30 years but may be scheduled for up to 40 years.

An actual loss loan may not exceed $500,000 or the calculated amount of the actual loss, whichever is less, for each disaster. The interest rate is 8 percent on loans for actual losses caused by disasters on and after October 1, 1981. The interest rate is 5 percent on loans for actual losses caused between September 30, 1978 and October 1, 1981. Loans are authorized for counties which are contiguous to counties already named as eligible for loans due to losses from natural disasters occurring after May 30, 1983.

A farmer who cannot obtain credit elsewhere is eligible for an actual loss loan of up to $500,000 per disaster at an interest rate of 5 percent on the first $100,000 borrowed. Amounts above $100,000, up to the limit of $500,000, will be subject to an interest rate of 8 percent. The interest rate on loans that are deferred, consolidated, rescheduled or reamortized is set at the original rate or the current rate, whichever is lower. The Small Business Act of 1980, Public Law 96-302, made creditworthy borrowers eligible for FmHA emergency disaster actual loss loans at a market rate of interest.

The following table shows 1985 actual and estimated 1986 and 1987 number of loans and program levels. The guaranteed program levels reflect the full principal amount of the loan of which part is guaranteed by the U.S. Government.

Rural housing insurance fund.—This fund was established in 1965 (Public Law 89-117) pursuant to section 517 of title V of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended. This fund may be used to insure or guarantee rural housing loans for single family homes, rental and cooperative housing, farm labor housing, rural housing sites and to make rental assistance payments authorized by Section 521(a). Loan programs are limited to rural areas which include towns, villages, and other places which are not part of an urban area and which have a population not in excess of 2,500 inhabitants, or is in excess of 2,500 but not in excess of 10,000 if rural in character, or has a population in excess of 10,000 but not more than 20,000 and is not within a standard metropolitan statistical area and has a serious lack of mortgage credit for low- and moderate-income borrowers.

The 1987 budget proposes to terminate rural housing programs under this account. The functions under these programs are proposed to be transferred to the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The major programs currently funded through the Rural Housing Insurance Fund are:

Section 504 very low-income housing repair loans.—Home repair loans for very low-income owner/occupants are made from amounts available in this fund. These loans are made to families and individuals to repair their dwellings in order to make them safe and to remove health hazards. The loans are made at 1 percent interest for a term of not more than 20 years and presently carry a maximum lifetime assistance level (loan or combination loan and grant) of $7,500. No program is proposed for 1987.

Section 502 very low and low to moderate income housing loans.—Individual home ownership loans are made to very low, low and moderate income individuals and families who are unable to obtain home ownership financing from conventional sources on terms they reasonably can be expected to meet. Loans may be made to eligible applicants to construct, improve, alter, repair, or replace dwellings, and may include funds to purchase a conventionally constructed or manufactured house and related building sites. These loans generally have a term of up to 33 years and currently bear a note rate based on the cost of Treasury borrowings. However, interest credits may reduce a borrower's effective interest rate to as low as 1 percent. No program is proposed for 1987.

Section 514 domestic farm labor housing loans.—These loans are made to farm owners, public or private nonprofit organizations of farm workers to provide modest living quarters, basic household furnishings, and related facilities, including the land necessary for an adequate site for domestic farm labor or Indian tribe housing. Loans bear interest at 1 percent and in some cases may be made in conjunction with a domestic farm labor housing grant. No program is proposed for 1987.

Section 515 domestic rural rental housing loans.—Rural rental and cooperative housing loans are made to individuals, corporations, partnerships, Indian tribes and public bodies with the objective of providing low-rent housing and related facilities for elderly or handicapped persons or families of low or moderate income. These loans bear a note rate based on the cost of Treasury borrowings and may be subsidized to a rate as low as 1 percent through interest credits and terms up to 50 years. This subsidy permits rents to be adjusted to a level that lower income families can afford to pay.

Section 521 rural rental assistance.—The objective of the rental assistance program is to reduce rents paid by low-income families living in FmHA financed rental projects and farm labor housing projects. Payments from the fund are made to the project owner to make up the difference between the tenant's payment and the approved rental rate established for the unit. No program is proposed for 1987.

Section 524 rural housing site loans.—Site development loans are made for the purchase and development of land to be subdivided into building sites and sold on a nonprofit basis to low- and moderate-income families or to organizations for rental or cooperative housing. These loans have a term of 2 years and currently bear a note rate based on the cost of Treasury borrowing. No program is proposed for 1987.

The fiscal year 1987 Budget proposes to conduct a pilot program of loan asset sales without recourse to institutional and individual investors. The pilot program is proposed to commence in fiscal year 1987 with a sale of $100 million of rural housing loans, and continue in similar amounts for each year through fiscal year 1991.

The following table shows 1985 actual and estimated 1986 number of units and program levels:

[1] The 1985 limitation on guaranteed loans excludes $80 million transferred to the Agricultural Credit Insurance Fund for operating loans.

[2] Amounts shown are based on repurchases of CBO's, loans purchased from investors, and other.

The Rural Development Insurance Fund (RDIF) was established on October 1, 1972, pursuant to section 116 of the Rural Development Act of 1972 (Public Law 92-419), approved August 30, 1972, which also provided for transfer of the assets and liabilities of the Agricultural Credit Insurance Fund applicable to loans for water systems and waste disposal facilities to this fund. The 1985 farm bill, signed December 23, 1985, extends authorization of the RDIF through fiscal year 1988.

The fund is used to insure or guarantee loans for water systems and waste disposal facilities, community facilities, and industrial development in rural areas.

The objective of the water and waste disposal loan program is to provide assistance to enable eligible borrowers (communities and others) to attain basic human amenities, to alleviate health hazards, to promote the orderly growth of rural areas by meeting the need for financing new and improved rural water and waste disposal systems and to meet National Clean Water Standards and the requirements of the Safe Drinking Water Act.

Water and waste disposal development loans may be made to organizations including certain Indian tribes, corporations not operated for profit, and public and quasi-public agencies for the development, storage, treatment, purification, or distribution of water and/or the collection, treatment, or disposal of waste in rural areas. Loans are made for facilities which primarily serve farmers, ranchers, farm tenants, farm laborers, and other rural residents in rural areas which shall not include any areas in any city or town having a population in excess of 10,000 inhabitants according to the latest decennial census of the United States. These loans are repayable in terms not to exceed the useful life of the facility or 40 years, whichever is less. These loans bear interest not in excess of the current market yield for comparable term municipal obligations. Those loans made in areas where the median household income falls below the poverty level and the project is needed to meet health or sanitary standards bear interest not in excess of 5 percent. An intermediate rate, which is the poverty line rate plus one-half the difference between the 5 percent and the market rate, applies when the loan does not meet the requirements of the poverty line rate and the median household income of the service area is not more than 85 percent of the nonmetropolitan median household income of the State. No program is proposed for fiscal year 1987. Assistance to rural communities will be provided by the Department of Housing and Urban Development's Community Development Block Grant Program, state and local governments, and commercial sources.

The objective of the community facility loan program is to assist rural communities in developing or improving essential community facilities.

Community facility loans may be made to organizations including certain Indian tribes, corporations not operated for profit, and public and quasi-public agencies for the purposes of constructing, enlarging, extending, or otherwise improving community facilities which provide essential services to rural residents and contribute to the overall development of the community. Such facilities include those that provide fire and rescue services, health care, hydroelectric generation, and community, social, and cultural benefits. Loans are made for facilities which primarily serve farmers, ranchers, farm tenants, farm laborers, and other rural residents in rural areas which shall not include any area in any city or town having a population in excess of 20,000 inhabitants according to the latest decennial census of the United States. These loans are repayable in terms not to exceed the useful life of the facility or 40 years, whichever is less. These loans bear interest not in excess of the current market yield for comparable term municipal obligations. Those made in areas where the median household income falls below the poverty level and the project is needed to meet health or sanitary standards bear interest not in excess of 5 percent. An intermediate rate, which is the poverty plus one-half the difference between the 5 percent and the market rate, applies when the loan does not meet the requirements of the poverty line rate and the median household income of the service area is not more than 85 percent of the nonmetropolitan median household income of the state. An additional 2 percent is added to the interest rate for projects built on prime farmland when an optional site is available. No program is proposed for fiscal year 1987. Assistance to rural communities will be provided by the Department of Housing and Urban Development's Community Development Block Grant Program, state and local governments, and commercial sources.

The objective of the guaranteed industrial development loan program is to facilitate the development or improvement of business and industry in rural areas, to stimulate economic growth, to create employment opportunities, and to improve the environmental climate. No program is proposed for fiscal year 1987.

The fiscal year 1987 budget proposes to conduct a pilot program to sell the loan portfolio without recourse to institutional and individual investors. The pilot program would begin in fiscal year 1987 with a sale of $100 million of loans each year for 5 years.

The following table shows the number of loans and the program levels for 1985 actual and estimated for 1986 and 1987. The guaranteed program levels reflect the full principal amount of the loans of which part is guaranteed by the U.S. Government.

Technical assistance.—Technical assistance is provided through 2,934 conservation districts to land users and decisionmakers, including individual landowners and operators, community groups, units of government, Indian tribes, and others for the planning of conservation programs and installation of needed conservation systems on the land, including design, layout, installation, and consultation services.

Combinations of needed soil and water conservation systems are planned in relation to each other to achieve well-balanced conservation programs. Technicians of the Soil Conservation Service explain the various soil conditions, develop alternative uses and treatments, help to evaluate the costs and returns of conservation work, and furnish onsite assistance to farmers, ranchers, and others in applying the needed treatments. About 70 percent of the total annual investment in conservation practices applied through the conservation technical assistance program is made by private landusers. Since 1981, accelerated technical assistance has been provided to targeted geographic areas with severe erosion, water conservation and water quality problems. During fiscal year 1987, SCS will continue to emphasize work on critical resource problems caused by excessive soil erosion and inefficient use of limited water supplies. Personnel funded within this account will be providing technical assistance to implement the Conservation Reserve Program.

MAIN WORKLOAD FACTORS

Decisionmakers receiving technical services	942,681	940,000	940,000
Acres improved through conservation technical assistance	64,440,771	64,500,000	64,500,000
Tons of soil erosion reduced	230,532,400	232,332,400	232,332,400

Inventorying and monitoring.—Inventorying and monitoring provides soil, water, and related resource data. All activities under this program will be terminated by the end of fiscal year 1987.

Soil surveys.—Soil surveys and investigations are made of the Nation's soil resources, with interpretations and publications that provide physical land facts needed for program development, resource conservation planning, installation of planned practices, and for use by other Federal, State, and local agencies in making land-use decisions. This program is being continued in the fiscal year 1987 budget.

Acres mapped annually	40,184,658	43,694,000	43,038,000
Soil surveys ready for publication (number)	73	77	80

Snow survey water forecasting.—Water supply forecasts prepared from snow surveys in western states are used in making efficient seasonal use of water for irrigation, flood control, fish and wildlife, recreation, power generation, municipal and industrial water supply, and water quality management. This program is being continued in the fiscal year 1987 budget.

Operation of plant materials centers.—The selection and evaluation of plant materials are made at 20 plant materials centers through field trials to determine their suitability for erosion control, conservation, and other environmental improvements. This program is being continued in the fiscal year 1987 budget.

Resource appraisal and program development.—The Soil and Water Resources Conservation Act of 1977 provides for a report to the public and Congress at 5-year intervals beginning January 1980. A report was developed and submitted in December 1982. All activities under this program will be terminated by the end of fiscal year 1987.

The Department makes surveys of proposed small watershed projects, and work plans are prepared in cooperation with local sponsors. These plans outline the soil and water management problems in the watershed, the steps that have been or are authorized to be taken to alleviate these problems, the proposed works of improvement to be installed, the estimated benefits and costs, cost sharing, and operation and maintenance arrangements, and other facts necessary to justify Federal participation in project development. All activities of this program will be terminated by the end of fiscal year 1987.

This program provides for cooperation between the Federal Government and States and their political subdivisions in installing works of improvement: to reduce damage from floodwater, sediment, and erosion; for the conservation, development, utilization, and disposal of water; and for the conservation and proper utilization of land. The fiscal year 1987 budget proposes to terminate all activities under these programs by the end of fiscal year 1987.

Watershed operations authorized by Public Law 534.—The Department cooperates with soil conservation districts and other local organizations in planning and installing works of improvement for flood prevention in 11 watersheds authorized by the Flood Control Act of 1944. The Federal Government shares the cost of works of improvement for flood prevention, agricultural water management, recreation, and fish and wildlife development.

Within the 11 authorized projects, 406 subwatershed areas have been identified for planning purposes. Installation progress in these subwatersheds is as follows:

MAIN WORKLOAD FACTORS

Subwatershed status	1985 actual	1986 estimate	1987 estimate
Projects in preconstruction, end of year	20	16
Projects in construction, start of year	84	89
Projects completed construction during year		6

Projects continuing land treatment, end of year	65	68
Projects completed, end of year	160	160
Projects not started, end of year	77	76
Total subwatershed projects	406	406

Emergency watershed protection operations.—This program authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to undertake such emergency measures for runoff retardation and soil erosion prevention as may be needed to safeguard life and property from floods and the products of erosion on any watershed whenever natural elements or force causes a sudden impairment of that watershed. An emergency is considered to exist when a watershed is suddenly impaired by flood, fire, wind, earthquake, or other natural cause and consequently life and property are endangered by floodwater, erosion, or sediment discharge. The emergency area need not be declared a national disaster area to be eligible for emergency watershed protection. Emergency watershed protection is applicable to small scale, localized disasters as well as large scale disasters. State environmental, natural resource, fish and game, and other agencies participate in planning and coordinating emergency work.

Small watershed operations authorized by Public Law 566.—The Department provides technical and financial assistance to local organizations to install measures for watershed protection, flood prevention, agricultural water management, recreation, and fish and wildlife enhancement.

Watershed work plans are prepared by sponsoring local organizations with the Department's assistance or through State and local resources. After work plans are approved by the Department or Congress (projects where the estimated Federal contribution will exceed $5 million require congressional approval), technical services and financial assistance are provided for specific works of improvements.

The following tabulation shows the status of Public Law 566 projects:

MAIN WORKLOAD FACTORS

Status of projects approved for operations	1985 actual	1986 estimate	1987 estimate
Projects in preconstruction	121	116
Projects under construction, start of year	401	414
New construction starts	13	10
Projects completed during year	18	10
Projects Land Treatment continuing	37	17
Subtotal projects requiring funds	590	567
Projects not requiring funds	149	177
Projects completed in prior years	611	629
Total approved projects	1,350	1,373

Loan services.—Loans are made to local sponsoring organizations to finance the local cost of installing works of improvement in Public Law 534 and approved Public Law 566 watershed projects. Repayment with interest is required within 50 years after the principal benefits of improvements first become available. Loans are made from funds available for this purpose from the Agricultural credit insurance fund of the Farmers Home Administration. Loan services related to processing and making loans are financed from this appropriation.

The 1987 Budget proposes to terminate funding for construction starts and does not provide for new obligations for on-going projects after February 1, 1986.

This program provides cost-share and technical services to participating landowners or operators in the Great Plains area in the development and installation of long-term conservation plans and practices for their land under contracts entered into in prior years. It is a voluntary program in 518 designated counties of 10 Great Plains States. Contracts with individual landowners range in time from 3 to 10 years.

MAIN WORKLOAD FACTORS

Program participants:	1985 actual	1986 estimate	1987 estimate
Number of new contracts during year	943	725
Number of contracts serviced during year	6,930	6,476
Number of acres under contracts	14,734,137	13,309,000

As of September 30, 1985, there were 5,751 active contracts on hand. Co-landowners or operators finance the entire cost of installing recurring management-type practices and pay a specified part of the cost-shared practices installed on their land. Program regulations provide that cost-share rates offered in any contract shall not exceed 80 percent of the cost of installing eligible practices within the designated county. There is a cost-sharing limitation of $35 thousand for any contract. The fiscal year 1987 budget does not include funding for this program. The Administration proposed the termination of the Great Plains Program by the end of fiscal year 1986.

This program provides for the Department to assist States, local units of government, groups and individuals in developing area plans for resource conservation and development (RC&D).

RC&D areas are provided technical and financial assistance to help States and local units of government prepare plans for resource development and economic improvement and to plan and install community-type conservation projects or measures. Financial contributions, loans, and other Federal assistance are used to help carry out measures specified in RC&D area plans. Loans were made through the Farmers Home Administration to qualified local organizations to help finance their share of the costs of installing the measures.

The RC&D program would be terminated by the end of 1987.

The following tabulation shows the status of RC&D areas authorized to receive technical and financial assistance.

The major objectives of the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service are to protect the animal and plant resources of the Nation from destructive pests and diseases.

Plant disease and pest control.—Through inspections at ports of entry, insects, plant diseases, nematodes and animal pests and diseases harmful to agriculture are prevented from entering this country. Cooperative programs with the States are conducted to prevent the spread of and/or to eradicate certain plant pests already established in this country. The 1987 estimates maintain support for plant disease and pest control efforts, while decreasing the boll weevil, golden nematode, grasshopper and pink bollworm programs and eliminating the imported fire ant, noxious weeds and witchweed programs. Legislation will be proposed to recover $1.8 million in fees for certifying the health of plant exports.

Animal disease and pest control.—Inspections and programs are conducted to keep communicable diseases of foreign origin from entering this country and to prevent the spread of diseases through interstate shipments of livestock or distribution of impure or impotent veterinary biologics. In cooperation with States, programs are directed at the control and eradication of livestock diseases present in this country. Foreign animal diseases, should they enter this country are rapidly diagnosed and outbreaks which are of economic significance and for which the Secretary of Agriculture declares a national emergency are controlled and eradicated. The 1987 estimates continue support for the majority of animal disease and pest control programs, including the brucellosis and screwworm eradication programs. The budget proposes elimination of the animal welfare, horse protection, and pseudorabies programs. Legislation will be proposed to recover total costs for the import-export and veterinary biologics programs through user fees, as well as $2.0 million for diagnostic activities.

Animal Damage Control.—Conducted to reduce wildlife-caused damage to agricultural interests and protect land use and wildlife resource values through the maintenance of a Federal presence in cooperation with the States and other cooperators. The Department of Interior conducted the program prior to 1986. The budget proposes a decrease for this program in fiscal year 1987.

Construction of facilities.—In 1981, the Congress appropriated funds under a separate account to APHIS, Buildings and Facilities. The activity reflected shows obligations from prior year moneys.

Contingencies.—The 1987 estimates provide a contingency fund of $3.0 million.

The FGIS provides for the establishment of official United States standards for grain, promotes the uniform application thereof by official inspection personnel, provides for an official inspection system for grain, and regulates the weighing and certification of the weight of grain shipped in interstate or foreign commerce as authorized by the U.S. Grain Standards Act (USGSA), as amended, and the regulations thereof, and the Agricultural Marketing Act of 1946 (AMA).

Standardization activities include establishing and updating U.S. grain standards and research; developing and improving methods to ensure the accurate and uniform application of the standards.

Compliance activities include the delegation, designation and review of the official performance of State and private inspection agencies, licensing of personnel and investigation of technical violations.

The International Monitoring Staff will brief foreign buyers, assess foreign inspection and weighing techniques, and respond to foreign quality and quantity complaints.

An advisory committee consisting of members from the grain industry was established to advise the agency regarding efficient and economical implementations of the USGSA.

The Federal Grain Inspection Service provides a uniform system for the inspection and weighing of grain. Services provided under this system are financed through a fee supported revolving fund.

Fee supported programs include direct services, supervision activities and administrative functions. Direct services include official grain inspection and weighing by FGIS employees at certain export ports as well as the inspection of U.S. grain shipped through Canada. FGIS supervises the inspection and weighing activities performed by its own employees. The agency also oversees the inspection and weighing of grain performed by employees of 8 delegated States and 81 designated State and private agencies. FGIS provides an appeal service of original grain inspections and a registration system for grain exporting firms. Through support from the Association of American Railroads and user fees, FGIS conducts a railroad track scale testing program. In addition, the agency provides grading services on request for rice and grain related products under the authority of the Agricultural Marketing Act of 1946 (AMA).

AMS activities assist producers and handlers of agricultural commodities by providing a variety of marketing services. These services continue to become more complex as the volume of agricultural commodities increases, as a greater number of new processed commodities are developed, and as the agricultural market structure undergoes extensive changes. Marketing changes include increased concentration in food retailing, direct buying, decentralization of processing, growth of interregional competition, vertical integration, and contract farming. The individual activities include:

Market news service.—The market news program provides the agricultural community with information pertaining to the movement of agricultural products. This nationwide service provides reports daily on the supply, demand and price of over 400 commodities throughout the country.

AMS is one of five participants in the USDA Electronic Dissemination of Information (EDI) system. EDI was initiated in July 1985 and releases selected statistical USDA information to the public in electronic form.

Inspection and standardization.—Nationally uniform standards of quality for agricultural products are established and applied to specific lots of products to: promote confidence between buyers and sellers; reduce hazards in marketing due to misunderstandings and disputes arising from the use of nonstandard descriptions; encourage better preparation of uniform quality products for market; and furnish consumers with more definite information on the quality of products they buy. Grading services are provided for cotton and domestic and imported tobacco.

Continuous in-plant inspection of all plants manufacturing liquid, frozen or dried egg products is provided with quarterly inspection of egg handlers and hatcheries to ensure the proper disposition of shell eggs unfit for human consumption. Imported egg products are controlled to make certain that the inspection systems in exporting countries are equal to United States' standards.

A uniform government food specification system is maintained to provide a more efficient Federal food procurement service.

Market protection and promotion.—This program consists of: (1) the research and promotion programs which are designed to improve the competitive position and expand markets for cotton, eggs, wheat, milk and dairy products, wool, mohair, and potatoes; (2) the Federal Seed Act, Plant Variety Protection Act, and the Export Fruit Acts; and (3) the administration of the Capper-Volstead Act and the Agricultural Fair Practices Act.

In a referendum held in August 1985, producers voted by an 89.7 percent margin to continue the mandatory 15 cents per hundred weight assessment on all milk marketed by producers in the 48 contiguous States to fund a national dairy product research, promotion and education program. This assessment was originally provided in the Dairy and Tobacco Adjustment Act of 1983.

Federal seed inspectors conduct tests on samples to help assure truthful labeling of agricultural and vegetable seeds sold in interstate commerce. Plant variety protection provides for the issuance of certificates to assure that developers of novel varieties of sexually reproduced plants have exclusive rights to sell, reproduce, import and export such varieties for a period of 18 years.

The Export Fruit Acts promote U.S. foreign trade of various fruits to protect the reputation of U.S. grown fruit in foreign markets and to prevent deception as to the quality of such products moving in foreign commerce.

The Capper-Volstead Act and the Agricultural Fair Practices Act protect producers against discriminatory practices by handlers, permits producers to engage in cooperative efforts, and assures that such cooperatives do not engage in practices that monopolize or restrain trade.

The Agricultural Labor Affairs Office was transferred to the Economic Research Service in 1985. This Office is responsible for monitoring producer labor needs and developing policy to help assure adequate agricultural labor sources for continuation of uninterrupted production and harvest.

Wholesale market development.—This program is designed to enhance the marketing of agricultural commodities in the United States by conducting research into more efficient marketing methods for agricultural commodities and by providing technical assistance to urban areas interested in improving their food distribution facilities. Because States are now able to perform this function adequately, Federal participation will end after fiscal year 1986.

For 1987, legislation will be proposed to finance the market news activity; the standardization activity; the Export Fruit Act; the Plant Variety Protection Act; the Market Development and Assistance program; and the inspection of egg processing operations under the Egg Products Inspection Act on a user fee basis. These proposals are designed to align program demand with willingness to pay for these specialized services. In addition, legislation is proposed to repeal the Federal Seed Act and to amend the Egg Products Inspection Act to permit less than continuous inspection of egg processing operations and reduce shell egg surveillance.

Grants are made on a matching fund basis to State departments of agriculture to carry out specifically approved programs designed to enhance marketing efficiency. Under this activity, specialists have worked with farmers, marketing firms, and other agencies in solving marketing problems and in using research results. No program is being proposed in 1987.

License fees are deposited in this special fund and are used to meet the costs of administering the Perishable Agricultural Commodities and the Produce Agency Acts (7 U.S.C. 491-497, 499a-499s). The current annual license fee is set at $180 plus $72 for each additional business facility operated by the applicant in excess of nine facilities, up to a maximum of $1,200.

The Acts are intended to assure equitable treatment to farmers and others in the marketing of fresh and frozen fruits and vegetables. Commission merchants, dealers, and brokers handling these products in interstate and foreign commerce are licensed. Complaints of violations are investigated and violations dealt with by (a) informal agreements between the two parties, (b) formal decisions involving payment of reparation awards, and/or (c) suspension or revocation of license and/or publication of the facts.

Further protection was provided by a December 1984 amendment to the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act which requires traders to have trust assets on hand to meet their obligations to fruit and vegetable suppliers. To preserve their trust and establish their rights ahead of other creditors, unpaid suppliers file notice with both the Department and their debtors that payment is due.

Under section 32 of the act of August 24, 1935, as amended (7 U.S.C. 612c), an amount equal to 30 percent of customs receipts collected during each calendar year is automatically appropriated for expanding outlets for nonbasic commodities. An amount equal to 30 percent of receipts collected on fishery products is transferred to the Department of Commerce. Most of the funds are transferred to the Food and Nutrition Service and are used to purchase commodities under section 6 of the National School Lunch Act and other authorities specified in the child nutrition appropriation. If unforeseen commodity surpluses should develop, unobligated reserve balances are available for surplus removal.

Expenses and refunds, inspection and grading of farm products.—The commodity inspection and grading programs provide grading, examination, and certification services for a wide variety of fresh and processed food commodities using federally approved grade standards and purchase specifications. Commodities graded include poultry, livestock, meat, dairy products, and fresh and processed fruits and vegetables. These programs use official grade standards which reflect the relative quality of a particular food commodity based on laboratory testing and characteristics such as taste, color, weight and physical condition. Producers voluntarily request grading and certification services which are provided on a fee for service basis.

The Secretary of Agriculture is authorized by the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, as amended—under certain conditions—to issue Federal milk marketing orders establishing minimum prices which handlers are required to pay for milk purchased from producers.

Market administrators are appointed by the Secretary and are responsible for carrying out the terms of specific marketing orders. Their operating expenses, partly financed by assessments on regulated handlers and partly by deductions from producers, are reported in these schedules. These funds are collected locally, deposited in local banks, and disbursed directly by the market administrator.

The expenses of each local office are met from an administrative fund and a marketing service fund which are prescribed in each order. The administrative fund is derived from prorated handler assessments. The marketing service fund of the individual order provides for the expense of disseminating market information to producers who are not members of a qualified cooperative. It also provides for the verification of the weights, sampling, and testing of milk from these producers. The cost of these services is borne by such producers.

The maximum rates for administrative assessment and for marketing services are set forth in each order and adjustments below these rates are made from time to time upon recommendations by the market administrator and upon approval of the Agricultural Marketing Service to provide reserves at about a 6-month operating level. Upon termination of any order, the statute provides for distributing the proceeds from net assets pro rata to contributing handlers or producers as the case may be.

As of March 31, 1985, as required by title I of the Dairy and Tobacco Adjustment Act, market administrators collected over $381 million by charging 50 cents per hundredweight on all milk produced in the forty-eight contiguous States and marketed by producers for commercial use. These funds were used to partially offset the costs of the dairy price support paid diversion program.

Milk sold by regulated handlers supplied almost 171 million persons in calendar year 1984.

The principal purpose of the Office of Transportation is to facilitate an efficient domestic and international transportation system for U.S. agricultural products. This is done by providing assistance to exporters and firms by helping to solve international transportation problems relating to agriculture; assisting agricultural shippers and carriers in the new deregulation environment; and providing technical assistance to producers, producer groups, and rural communities to help them solve specific transport problems. This program is proposed for termination at the end of fiscal year 1987.

The major objectives of the Food Safety and Inspection Service are to assure that meat and poultry products are wholesome, unadulterated, and properly labeled and packaged, as required by the Federal Meat Inspection Act and the Poultry Products Inspection Act.

The Meat and Poultry Inspection program of the Food Safety and Inspection Service provides continuous inplant inspection of all domestic plants preparing meat or poultry products for sale or distribution; reviews foreign inspection systems and establishments that prepare meat or poultry products for export to the United States; and provides technical and financial assistance to States which maintain meat and poultry inspection programs.

Legislative changes which will permit collection of user fees to fund FSIS programs and provide for more efficient inspection are included in the 1987 FSIS budget proposal to allow recovery of full program costs.

The child nutrition programs provide cash and commodity meal subsidies through the school lunch, school breakfast, summer food service and child care food programs. Federal funds are also made available for nutrition studies and State administrative expenses. Proposed legislation will better target nutrition benefits to needy children by discontinuing subsidies to upper income students, while enhancing the use of commodities.

The goal of this program is to assure the integrity of the livestock, meat, and poultry markets and the marketplace in order to protect producers against unfair, deceptive, or discriminatory practices as well as those that are predatory or monopolistic in nature. Consumers and members of the livestock, poultry, and meat industries are also protected against unfair business practices in the marketing of meat and poultry, and from restrictions on competition which could unduly affect meat and poultry prices.

For 1987, legislation will be proposed to finance 100 percent of this activity on a user-charge basis.

The agency's research program includes studies of economic, financial, organizational, managerial, legal, social, and policy related issues that affect cooperatives. Data on membership, business volume, and financial condition are collected to detect changes in the structure, operation, and growth trends of cooperatives.

Technical assistance is provided in response to requests from cooperative boards of directors or steering committees. Such assistance includes feasibility analyses, merger and other organizational studies, strategic assessment and planning, and review of operations.

Educational materials are prepared by ACS to promote the knowledge of cooperative principles and practices.

Research is conducted and disseminated through eight regional forest experiment stations and the Forest Products Laboratory and includes both in-house and extramural programs.

Fire and atmospheric sciences research.—Research is conducted to develop improved methods to prevent and control wildfires; reduce loss of life, property, and forest resources; reduce wind and weather-related losses; and use fire to achieve forest and range objectives.

Forest insect and disease research.—Research is conducted to provide technology to optimize productivity, value, and land resource usefulness and to protect wood in use and in storage.

Forest inventory and analysis research.—Research is conducted to provide comprehensive, continuing information about forest land resources of the United States.

Renewable resources economics research.—Research is conducted to provide economic methodology and analyses for forest and rangeland activities and for related forest product distributed systems.

Timber management research.—Research is conducted to develop improved silvicultural alternatives and management guidelines to increase the productivity and multiple-use benefits of forest lands, maximize tree growth and quality, and maintain land productivity.

Watershed management and rehabilitation research.—Research is conducted to provide and test methods for protecting, managing, and improving forest and rangeland watersheds and to rehabilitate lands disturbed by mining.

Wildlife, range, and fish habitat research.—Research is conducted to maintain or improve wildlife and fish habitat; increase forage production; improve soil stability and vegetation cover; and integrate wildlife, fish, and livestock with other uses.

Forest recreation research.—Research is conducted to provide land managers with the technology for increasing and improving outdoor recreation experiences; and to develop knowledge to manage urban vegetation to obtain optimum benefits.

Forest products and harvesting research.—Research is conducted to provide technology to harvest and utilize timber more efficiently and in ways that are environmentally acceptable, to improve the performance of wood products, and to expand opportunities for wood products exports.

For 1987, forest research will be reduced by focusing on basic research thus allowing the private sector to concentrate on developmental and applied research. Competitive research grants will be terminated also.

Cooperative forestry assistance is provided to all the States, Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands, Guam, the Northern Mariana Islands and the Trust Territory of the Pacific to promote protection and management of forest lands.

Forest pest management.—Protects forest resources and processed wood from insects and diseases directly on National Forests and other Federal lands and in cooperation with States on non-Federal lands.

Fire protection.—Helps State forestry organizations to achieve fire protection efficiency through activities of national interest on non-Federal wildlands.

Forest management and utilization.—Improves management of non-industrial private forest resources; increases wood utilization; increases seedling production and nursery capacity of State tree nurseries; expands State tree improvement programs; and provides management and planning assistance.

Special projects.—Assistance will be provided to Minnesota for forestry impacts of the Boundary Waters Canoe Area Wilderness.

For 1987, financial assistance to the States will be terminated and limited technical assistance will be provided. State forestry programs have matured sufficiently to justify reduced Federal assistance.

The 156 national forests, 19 national grasslands, and 18 land utilization projects located in 44 States, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands are managed under multiple use and sustained yield principles. The natural resources of timber, range, watershed, wildlife and outdoor recreation are utilized in a planned combination that will best meet the needs of the Nation, without impairing productivity of the land and will be environmentally acceptable. These management and utilization principles are recognized in the Multiple-Use Sustained-Yield Act of June 12, 1960 (74 Stat. 215). Work programs and budget estimates are related to meeting the increased demands for specific National Forest resource needs through 1987 and for long-term objectives for the year 2020. Increases are provided in the budget for further attainment of these program objectives.

Land and resource protection.—Provides for the protection and/or maintenance of National Forest System users, resources, lands and facilities, including roads and trails.

Renewable resource management and utilization.—Provides for the management and utilization of the timber, wildlife, range, recreation, watershed, and soil resources on National Forest System lands.

For 1987, funding will be reduced because of a lower timber sales volume (10 billion board feet), eliminating resource improvement activities not cost effective, and reducing forest fire protection costs.

In addition, a 1986 supplemental will be requested to reimburse 1985 costs of forest fire suppression activities.

Construction of facilities.—

Recreation facilities.—Provides facilities necessary to safely meet recreation demand without sacrificing environmental values and without unduly impinging upon other resource uses of the National Forests.

Other facilities.—Provides for construction and acquisition of fire, administrative, and other improvements and related facilities necessary to carry out National Forest and State and private forestry programs. Includes fire lookouts, offices, dwellings and barracks for employee housing, service, and storage buildings, insectories, tree nursery buildings, dams, and other forest resource management projects. Efforts to make buildings more energy efficient (retrofit) will be continued.

Research construction.—Provides for construction, alteration, and improvement of research laboratories and related facilities, and for procurement and installation of necessary initial equipment needed to put the facility into operating condition. Efforts to make research facilities more energy efficient (retrofit) will be continued.

Road and trail construction.—

Road and trail construction.—Roads and trails are essential to the protection and management of the National Forest System, as well as providing access to National Forest System areas for recreation and utilization of their resources. Of the revenues received annually from National Forest activities, 10 percent is being transferred to the General Fund with a comparable amount appropriated to the construction program for road and trail construction activities.

Timber purchaser construction.—Roads may be constructed and/or reconstructed by a timber purchaser who in turn receives credit against timber value as a reimbursement. These roads are those required within a timber sale area specifically for the removal of the timber, but which will remain on the National Forest development road system for resource management purposes after the timber sale contract is completed. (16 U.S.C. 535, item (2); section 9 of Public Law 93-378; and section 3(a) of Public Law 93-344.) For 1987, construction will be reduced by eliminating all new facility construction and reducing road construction slightly.

Legislation will be proposed to provide for the operation and maintenance of National Forest recreation areas and facilities from recreation fee receipts. Recreationists who enjoy National Forest System lands will receive direct benefit from the fees collected. Land and Water Conservation Fund receipts will be used in 1987 to provide time for sufficient funds to accrue.

Payment to Minnesota.—At the close of each fiscal year the State of Minnesota is paid 0.75 percent of the appraised value of certain Superior National Forest lands in the counties of Cook, Lake, and St. Louis for distribution to these counties (16 U.S.C. 577g).

Payments to counties, National Grasslands.—Of the revenues received from the use of National Grasslands, 25 percent is paid to the counties in which such land is situated for funding local schools and roads (7 U.S.C. 1012).

Payments to States, National Forest Fund.—With minor exceptions, 25 percent of the money received from the national forests, including all the collections under 16 U.S.C. 576b, and all amounts allowed any timber purchaser for construction of roads, is paid to the States for funding local schools and roads of the county in which such forests are situated (16 U.S.C. 500 and Public Law 98-175).

Legislation will be proposed that would make these payments more rational by considering Government costs for timber, minerals, and land management necessary to generate gross timber, mineral and land receipts.

Legislation will be proposed to change the method of calculating the annual payment to the States from National Forest receipts. Under existing legislation, 25 percent of all moneys received from the National Forests during the prior fiscal year is paid to the States in which the forests are located, for the benefit of public schools and public roads of the county or counties in which such National Forests are situated. The proposed legislation would make these payments more rational by considering Government costs for timber, minerals, and land management necessary to generate gross timber, mineral, and land receipts. Recreation and grazing receipts would still be shared with the States on a gross basis.

The Working Capital Fund was established by the act of August 3, 1956 (16 U.S.C. 579b), as amended by the act of October 23, 1962 (16 U.S.C. 579b). It is a self-sustaining revolving fund which provides services to National Forests, research experiment stations, and when necessary, to other Federal agencies, and as provided by law, to State and private agencies and persons who cooperate with the Forest Service in fire control and other authorized programs.

The forestry related supply and support services provided by the Working Capital Fund in 1987 includes:

Equipment services which own, operate, maintain, replace, and repair common use motor driven and similar equipment. This equipment is rented to administrative units, that is, National Forests, research experiment stations, and other units, and in some cases to the other agencies, at rates which recover the cost of operation, repair and maintenance, management, and depreciation. The rates also include an increment which provides additional cash which, when added to depreciation earnings and the residual value of equipment, provides sufficient funds to replace the equipment.

Aircraft services which operate, maintain, and repair Forest Service owned aircraft used in fire surveillance and suppression and in other Forest Service programs. The aircraft are rented to National Forests, research experiment stations, and in some cases to other agencies, at rates which recover the cost of depreciation, operation, maintenance, repair, and improvements in the airworthiness of the aircraft. Aircraft replacement costs are financed from either appropriated funds or the Forest Service Working Capital Fund, or a combination of both.

Supply services operate the following common services:

Photo reproduction laboratories which store, reproduce, and supply aerial photographs, aerial maps, and other photographs of National Forest lands. The photographic reproductions are sold to National Forests, experiment stations, and others at cost.

Sign shops which manufacture and supply special signs for the National Forests for use in regulating traffic and as information to the public and other users of the National Forests. The signs are sold to National Forests and experiment stations at cost.

Subsistence which prepare and serve meals to Forest Service crews working in areas where adequate public restaurant facilities are not available.

Nurseries which operate forest tree nurseries and cold storage facilities for storage of tree and seed stock and a seed extractory. Tree seed is procured, cleaned, bagged, and stored in refrigerated facilities. Tree and seed stock is sold to National Forests, States, and other Federal agencies at cost.

The 1987 budget reduces coverage of the Quarterly Financial Report to its 1984 level and reduces the scope of the SSEL.

Foreign trade statistics.—Monthly, cumulative, and annual reports are published on the quantity, shipping weight, and dollar value of imports and exports, by mode of transportation, detailed commodity category, customs district, and country of origin or destination. Commodity classifications are being improved for comparability and other activities in support of the Trade Act of 1974.

The 1987 budget provides for improvement to the Harmonized System of import, export, and domestic production statistics.

Government statistics.—Reports are published annually regarding the revenue, expenditures, indebtedness and debt transactions, financial assets, employment, and payrolls of State and local governments. Quarterly information on State and local tax revenue is furnished on the national level by type of tax and governmental level, and information is provided on financial assistance programs of the Federal Government.

The program also provides special analyses of demographic, social, and economic trends.

International statistics.—This program provides estimates of population, labor force, and economic activity, including spatial distribution, and analyses concerning aspects of demographic policies, economic policies, and trends for various countries.

Housing statistics.—This program compiles statistics on the Nation's housing inventory and provides national and regional estimates of housing vacancy rates.

Other programs and publications.—

Statistical abstract and supplements.—The Statistical Abstract, prepared annually, summarizes Government and private statistics of the industrial, social, political, and economic activities of the United States.

General research.—Research is conducted on survey methods and techniques to find ways of improving the efficiency, accuracy, and timeliness of statistical programs.

Data systems development.—This program provides advanced data capture, data processing, and information retrieval technology to meet Bureau program requirements.

Reimbursable program.—The Bureau of the Census undertakes work for other governmental agencies when it is more appropriate or efficient to have the work performed by the Bureau. This appropriation funds legislatively mandated censuses of economic and demographic areas once or twice each decade and other authorized periodic activities.

Economic statistics programs.—

Economic censuses.—The economic censuses provide data on manufactures, mineral industries, retail and wholesale trade and service industries, construction, and transportation. The censuses are taken every fifth year, covering calendar years ending in two and seven.

The 1987 budget provides for the final planning stages of the censuses. The key operations will include mail-out preparations, questionnaire printing, and preparations for geographic coding. The budget also provides for improved coverage of the service sector.

Census of governments.—This census collects State and local government data on taxes, tax valuations, governmental receipts, expenditures, indebtedness, and number of employees. This census is taken every fifth year for calendar years ending in two and seven.

The 1987 budget provides for the governmental organization survey which identifies the universe of local governments needed to conduct the other census phases. The budget also provides for overall planning and research required for later phases.

Census of agriculture.—This census covers the agricultural sector of the economy and includes the census of irrigation.

The 1987 budget provides for continued planning for the Censuses of Irrigation and Outlying Areas, continued mail list preparation, and preparations for processing and tabulation.

Demographic statistics programs.—

Intercensal demographic estimates.—This program provides updated population and per capita income estimates for general purpose governmental units for use in the equitable allocation of funds by various Federal programs and for other purposes.

Decennial census.—The decennial census of population and housing involves the enumeration of the total population of the 50 States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands, Guam, Canal Zone, and other areas of U.S. sovereignty or jurisdiction.

The 1987 budget provides for evaluation of the 1986 test censuses, conducting 1987 test censuses and special purpose tests, planning and preparation for the 1988 dress rehearsal.

Sample redesign.—This program provides for revisions to the statistical samples used for monthly, quarterly and annual surveys. This effort is essential for maintaining the quality of demographic statistics.

The 1987 budget provides for redesign of major demographic surveys based on results of the 1990 census.

Geographic support.—This activity provides for the geographic requirements of the various periodic programs and involves accurate identification of both political and statistical areas, preparation of maps, and maintenance of geographic base files.

The 1987 budget provides for continued work on the conversion to a new automated geographic support system.

Data processing systems.—This program provides the resources necessary to improve the data processing installation of the Bureau of the Census.

Economic analysis.—The objective of this activity is to provide a clear picture of the state of the economy through the preparation, development, and interpretation of the economic accounts of the United States. The principal programs are:

National economic accounts.—The national income and product accounts, summarized by the gross national product (GNP), provide an up-to-date overall view of national production, its distribution, and its use as shown by the interrelated receipts and expenditures of producers, consumers, investors, government, and the foreign customers of the United States.

The 1987 budget provides an increase of $750 thousand for improvements in the annual tabulations of corporate tax return data that are required for the preparation of the GNP measures.

Analysis of business trends.—This work includes surveys of business investment, econometric models of the U.S. economy, a system of business cycle indicators, and analyses of the economic situation.

International economic accounts.—The balance of payments accounts provide a comprehensive and detailed view of economic transactions between the United States and foreign countries. The international investment accounts consist of the preparation, development, and analysis of estimates of U.S. direct investment abroad and foreign direct investment in the United States.

Policy support.—The objective of this activity is to support the Secretary, Under Secretary for Economic Affairs, and other Government officials in interpreting the state of the economy, and on matters relating to economic policy.

Productivity, technology, and innovation.—In 1987, the productivity, technology, and innovation program will be terminated. The patent licensing program will continue to be conducted by the National Technical Information Service (NTIS).

Reimbursable.—ESA, provides economic and statistical data and analyses on a reimbursable and advance payment basis to other Federal agencies, individuals, and firms requesting such information. Funds received for these services cover the cost of performing this work. ESA is authorized to perform these services under 31 U.S.C. 1535, 1536 and 15 U.S.C. 1526.

The activities of the International Trade Administration in the Department of Commerce are intended to develop the export potential of U.S. firms in a manner consistent with national security and foreign and economic policy and to promote an improved trade posture for U.S. industry.

Trade development.—The trade development program assesses the competitiveness of various U.S. industries; performs trade and investment analyses in support of industry programs and trade policy; and conducts export promotion programs directed toward industry sectors. Trade Adjustment Assistance to firms, including grants and loans, is proposed for termination in 1987.

International economic policy.—This program develops regional and multilateral economic policies; provides marketing services directly and through the Foreign Commercial Service which assist U.S. businesses in expanding exports; identifies long range trade and investment problems and develops remedial strategies.

Trade administration.—Through administration of the Export Administration Act, the trade administration program assures that export activity is consistent with national security, foreign policy, and U.S. material and commodity objectives; enforces the law against participation in foreign boycotts; assures the availability of industrial resources for national defense under the authority of the Defense Production Act; investigates antidumping and countervailing duty cases to ensure compliance with applicable U.S. statutes; and administers certain other statutory programs relating to imports and foreign trade zones.

In 1987, an increase of 13 positions and $2,215,000 is being requested for Export Administration to meet new or expanded statutory requirements resulting from passage of the Export Administration Amendments Act of 1985. Also, an increase of 55 positions and $2,374,000 is being requested for Import Administration to meet (1) the increased number of antidumping and countervailing duty petitions filed since 1980 as well as the growing complexity of their investigations, and (2) to support voluntary restraint steel agreements with other countries.

U.S. and foreign commercial services.—The U.S. and foreign commercial services counsel U.S. businessmen on exporting through 47 U.S. Commercial Service District Offices in the United States and Foreign Commercial Service Offices in 63 countries overseas. The program's goals are to increase the number of U.S. firms that export and the number of foreign markets to which they export; to provide business with information on U.S. and foreign government procurements through the Commerce Business Daily; to provide export market information; to promote and facilitate participation of U.S. firms in trade shows; and to encourage and sponsor additional involvement by private, state and local organizations.

[1] Amounts shown reflect 1985 adjustments to prior year outstanding balance and 1986 transfer to General Administration, Miscellaneous Appropriations.

[2] Amounts shown are based on the full principal amount of loans that are partially guaranteed by the U.S. Government. The comparable amount of limitations enacted on the basis of contingent liability are $15,000 thousand in 1985 and $6,000 thousand in 1986.

Reimbursable program.—This account includes receipts from activities that were previously financed through a separate trust fund; receipts for services rendered to other Federal agencies; and receipts received on a cost recovery basis from private entities for trade events and export information services.

In its leadership role of developing private sector market opportunities and coordinating Federal minority business development programs, the Minority Business Development Agency (MBDA) assists citizens in becoming involved in the American business system. In 1987, MBDA's goals are designed to increase business opportunities and encourage the creation and expansion of competitive minority businesses. MBDA will support higher business participation rates through increased cooperation with State and local governments and private sector organizations in support of minority business development.

Enterprise development.—Within this activity is MBDA's primary service delivery system—the Minority Business Development Centers (MBDC). The MBDC component is designed to coordinate, within approximately 100 Metropolitan Statistical Areas (MSA's), all resources available for minority business assistance and to provide client firms with direct management and technical assistance.

Resource development.—MBDA's private sector component assists minority firms in taking advantage of expanded market, capital, and management opportunities available through private corporations. Trade associations provide support to minority firms by facilitating access to information and services. Another component of the Resource Development activity is the public sector program. MBDA provides funding to state and local Offices of Minority Business Enterprise which promote and mobilize government resources in behalf of minority business and coordinate their activities with local MBDC's. The Public Sector program also coordinates all Federal activities regarding procurement and other goals for minority business assistance and works with local Minority Business Opportunity Committees.

Advocacy, research, and information.—Within this activity, MBDA provides advocacy efforts, a research program, and information systems for formulating policy decisions and for reducing information barriers to improve the participation rate of minority-owned businesses in the U.S. economy.

The 1987 Budget proposes to consolidate the Federal minority business assistance programs in MBDA. The proposed reorganization is designed to facilitate the coordination and delivery of minority business programs in order to encourage greater minority participation in the ownership and operation of businesses. Under the proposal, the Small Business Administration's minority small business procurement assistance program will be transferred to the Department of Commerce.

Federal procurement assistance.—This program assists small minority businesses primarily in the area of Federal contracts and subcontracts. Authorized under Section 8(a) of the Small Business Act, the program encourages Federal agencies to increase minority small businesses' share of procurements and provides assistance to minority small businesses in obtaining and completing Federal contracts. Other activities are designed to increase non-minority businesses' support for small business development through subcontracting. These activities will be linked together with MBDA's current programs and resources, enabling the Federal Government to provide a coordinated approach to minority business development.

Ocean and coastal programs.—These programs provide for the management and development of the marine environment and its resources; the conservation, rational use, and charting of the Nation's coastal regions; production of aeronautical and nautical charts; and geodetic surveys. Decreases are proposed for ocean assessments, ocean service centers, the Sea Grant Program, Coastal Zone Management grants, Geodetic Reference System, and the Undersea Research Program.

Marine fishery resource programs.—These programs provide for the management and conservation of the Nation's living marine resources, marine mammals, and endangered species stocks; and encourages the increased use of the resources through fishery product quality and safety research. Decreases will reduce information collection and analyses and related research; regulatory and management operations, including environmental impact analysis, and regional councils; and the fishery development and research program. The aquaculture research, salmon vessel buy-back, and fisheries grant programs will be terminated. Legislation is proposed to implement a Federal Marine recreational fishing license of $10 per angler with receipts to be shared equally between the Federal government and individual states.

Atmospheric programs.—These programs provide timely and accurate meteorologic, hydrologic, and oceanographic warnings, forecasts, and planning information to ensure the safety of the population, mitigate property losses, and improve the economic efficiency of the Nation. NOAA conducts research in atmospheric and hydrologic processes and conditions to improve short-term and long-term predictions of environmental changes. Additional funding in 1987 provides for increases in hurricane prediction, radiatively important trace species research, and the Advanced Weather Interactive Processing System. Specialized weather services which can be conducted by the private sector will be reduced or eliminated. Other decreases propose to consolidate several regional headquarters and to terminate the weather modification grant program.

Satellite and environmental data and information services.—These programs provide for the operation of a LANDSAT system, and polar-orbiting and geostationary satellites; provide global environmental data and information products and services to users in commerce, industry, agriculture, science and engineering, the general public and Federal, State, and local agencies. Increases provide for procurements of replacement satellites, upgrade of ground systems, and establishment of a Mission Control Center for Search and Rescue Operations. Proposed decreases will eliminate support of a two-polar satellite system.

Program support.—These programs provide for overall NOAA management, NOAA's share of the Regional Administrative Support Centers, and the operational and logistics support of ships, marine centers, and aircraft to support NOAA missions. Increased funding is provided to upgrade instrumentation on hurricane surveillance aircraft. Proposed decreases in 1987 include the National Advisory Committee on Oceans and Atmosphere, the number of ships and days at sea, and savings resulting from the substitution of charters for the fisheries research fleet.

An amount equal to 30% of the gross receipts from customs duties on imported fishery products is transferred to the Department of Commerce annually.

In 1986, this grant program provides for further development of the U.S. fishing industry and promotion of fishery resources.

In 1987, all funds in this account are proposed to be transferred to offset the cost of marine fishery resource programs in the "Operations, research, and facilities" appropriation.

This Fund is financed through collections from foreign vessel owners who fish within the U.S. Fishery Conservation Zone. Collections to the Fund are used by the Secretary of Commerce to pay the salaries of observers and program support personnel, and the costs of data management and analysis of the observer program. The observers collect scientific information on the foreign catch, and monitor compliance with the provisions of the Fishery Conservation and Management Act (FCMA) of 1976. In 1985, foreign fishermen began to contract directly for observers certified by the Secretary of Commerce.

This program provided for loans to vessel operators at subsidized rates for purchasing, constructing, equipping, maintaining, repairing, or operating new or used commercial fishing vessels or gear. Public Law 98-498 extended the expiration of this fund, established under the Fish and Wildlife Act of 1956, to September 30, 1986. During 1986, the loan portfolio will be administered under the Operations, research, and facilities appropriation. Beginning in 1987, receipts from foreign fishing fees will be transferred each year to the General Fund of the Treasury and the loan portfolio will be transferred to and administered by the Grants and Loan Administration under the Office of the Secretary. No new loans will be made from this fund.

This fund provides for payment to vessel owners and crews to compensate for certain financial losses sustained as a result of foreign seizures of American fishing vessels found within 200 miles of their coasts. Through 1977, funds in this account were derived from Federal appropriations and fees from vessel owners. Beginning in 1978, the basic annual appropriation was discontinued, although appropriated funds could be requested if the fund's balance was depleted.

The Airport and Airway Improvement Act of 1982 (49 U.S.C. 2205) authorizes use of the Airport and Airway Trust Fund for financing the Aviation Weather Services program and Next Generation Radar (NEXRAD) administered by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) of the Department of Commerce. NOAA provides meteorological observations, forecasts, warnings, and advisories in support of the National Airspace System. NEXRAD with Doppler capability will provide nationwide coverage for timely, accurate detection of severe weather and floods.

The Office administers laws governing the granting of patents for inventions and the registration of trademarks.

Public Law 97-247 provides for a portion of Office operating costs to be recovered through user fee revenues. Since 1983, all fees are retained in the PTO appropriation and are available along with appropriated funds. Collections were $107.3 million in 1985 and are estimated to be $119.5 million in 1986 and $131.8 million in 1987.

An Automation Master Plan revised for this budget submission provides for the automation of the majority of the functions and operations of the Office by the 1990's. The Plan proposes a three stage approach to complete the progressive development and installation of system capabilities. The 1987 increases will provide for the expansion of the Automated Patent System and the Data Input/Output System. Automation resources are distributed among the four activities of the Office.

Patent process.—Applications are examined to determine inventor entitlements to a patent for the claimed invention. Patent application examination also includes quasi-judicial review in appeal and interference proceedings, and the publication of issued patents.

The 1987 increases support programs to reduce patent application pendency time to 18 months by 1987; to shorten appeals decision time; to improve patent search quality through the deployment of in-house access to automated data bases; to prepare the examiner work space for automation; and to support the automated patent system and the automated data input/output system.

Key patent application workload and performance data are:

	1984 actual	1985 actual	1986 estimate	1987 estimate
Applications in Office (start of year)	243,465	240,304	237,197	227,187

Total pendency in Office, all applications (in months)	25.0	23.2	21.1	18.9

Trademark process.—This activity provides for the examination of applications to determine whether the statutory criteria for the Federal registration of the trademark or service mark have been met. When the criteria are met, a registration is printed and issued to the applicant. Examination also includes inter partes proceedings involving oppositions, cancellations, and interferences. The 1987 funding maintains the reduced pendencies in trademark examination, and provides increases for the integrated Automated Trademark System, for text editing and proofreading contracts and staff increases for the Trial and Appeal Board.

Key trademark application workload and performance data are:

	1984 actual	1985 actual	1986 estimate	1987 estimate
Applications in Office (start of year)	118,878	106,585	76,362	76,362

Pending time to first action (in months)	5.3	2.6	3.0	3.0
Pending time to registration/abandonment (in months)	19.1	13.8	13.0	13.0

Information dissemination.—Materials and services which assist in the examination of patent and trademark applications and in the transfer of technological information are provided in this activity. Specific materials and services include the maintenance of subject matter search files of prior art documents; maintenance of a scientific library and public search rooms; preparation of copies of patents, trademark registrations, and official documents; assignment of patents and trademark rights; and administration of printing.

The 1987 increases provide funds to support microfilming the increased volume of patent applications and overhauling equipment used in patent and trademark copy reproduction.

Executive direction and administration.—Management and administration of the Office are provided by this activity. The pre-examination correspondence processing function is expanded to keep pace with increased application filings and enhanced examiner production. The automation staff is enhanced to carry out initiatives identified in the Automation Master Plan.

Measurement research and standards.—This subactivity includes programs in the areas of fundamental physical measurements and standards, radiation measurements and standards, analytical chemical measurements and standards, chemical properties and processes, and measurement technology transfer.

Materials science and engineering.—This subactivity includes programs in the areas of materials characterization, metallurgy and metals processing, and polymer and ceramic science. The 1987 increase will fund the development of key measurement methods and data pertaining to the use and manufacture of advanced ceramics.

Engineering measurements and standards.—This subactivity includes programs in the areas of electronic and electrical measurements, chemical engineering metrology, mathematical sciences, manufacturing research and standards, building research and fire research. A 1987 increase will provide measurement technology and services for the components of fiber optic systems. In 1987, the building research and fire research programs will be terminated.

Computer sciences and technology.—This subactivity provides for the establishment of government-wide automated data processing (ADP) standards and technical support for U.S. interests in international standards development. This program will be reduced to $5 million in 1987.

Research support activities.—This subactivity includes the technical competence program, research associate program, computing support, product standards, facilities construction and maintenance, and resources transferred to the Working Capital Fund. Increases in 1987 include a major capital investment for the construction of a Cold Neutron Research Facility and funding for scientific computing which will provide the expertise to achieve greater productivity in the use of the Department of Commerce consolidated scientific computer system. In 1987 the technical competence and research associate programs will be reduced.

The National Telecommunications and Information Administration (NTIA) is the principal executive branch adviser to the President on domestic and international communications policy. Additionally, it manages the Federal radio frequency spectrum and performs extensive research in telecommunications sciences.

Domestic, Federal and international policies—

Domestic and Federal policies.—In 1987, NTIA will continue to develop and advocate policies to decrease regulation and increase competition in the domestic telecommunications marketplace. Special emphasis will be placed on emerging technologies. NTIA will also continue its efforts in the identification and analysis of issues affecting emergency communications planning.

International policies.—In 1987, NTIA will continue to develop and advocate policies for the advancement of U.S. interests in the international telecommunications area. In coordination with the Department of State, the agency will continue to discharge the Presidential responsibility for oversight of the Communications Satellite Corporation (COMSAT). The increase in 1987 will permit NTIA to expand international conference preparation activities and increase bilateral trade negotiations support.

Spectrum management—

Spectrum plans and policies.—In 1987, NTIA will continue to prepare for, participate in, and implement the results of international, regional, and national conferences addressing spectrum allocation and utilization. Also, NTIA will formulate, in coordination with the FCC, plans and policies for efficient use of the spectrum.

Spectrum management, analysis and operations.—In 1987, NTIA will continue to authorize frequency assignments, review proposed Federal telecommunications systems, conduct frequency band studies and compliance activities.

Telecommunication sciences research—

Spectrum research and analysis.—In 1987, NTIA will continue to conduct applied research and analysis as a basis for improving the efficiency of spectrum use.

Systems and networks research and analysis.—In 1987, NTIA will assess and develop domestic and international technical performance standards to facilitate competition in telecommunications products and services. Additionally, analytical methods and automated models will be employed to assist in the development of credible and defensible positions before international conferences and committees.

The public telecommunications facilities program has provided grants for planning and construction of noncommercial telecommunications facilities in areas not previously served by public television and radio. Since over 95% of the United States currently receives public broadcast programming, funding for this grant program is not requested in 1987.

Legislation will be proposed to establish the Small Business Administration (SBA) as a new organizational unit within the Department of Commerce, thereby helping to consolidate Federal commercial and business programs in one agency. The SBA will coordinate Federal small business programs and represent small business interests within the Department of Commerce and the Executive Branch. The following small business activities will be conducted by SBA.

Advocacy and the National Advisory Council.—These activities collect information and conduct research into the impact that public policy decisions and economic conditions have or may have on small businesses and assure that small business interests are considered during the legislative and regulatory processes. The programs serve as a source of information about small business for other Federal agencies, the Congress, and the public. For small businesses, these activities serve as a resource about Federal programs and advocate small business concerns within the Federal Government.

Procurement Assistance.—In order to assist small businesses with the Federal procurement process this activity coordinates the development and implementation of Federal small business procurement policy and administers the Certificate of Competency, Break-out Procurement, and Innovation and Research programs. Through the Procurement Automated Source System (PASS), small business can be identified as potential contractors and subcontractors for Federal projects. In addition, this office works closely with the Small and Disadvantaged Business Utilization Specialists of other Federal agencies to help assure that small businesses obtain their fair share of Federal procurement contracts.

Service Corps of Retired Executives.—This network of retired business executive volunteers provides management counseling and training to small business owners and to individuals who would like to start businesses.

[Sec. 104. None of the funds made available in this or any prior Act shall be obligated or expended to relocate the National Marine

Fisheries Service's Sandy Hook Laboratory, or any of its activities or programs, out of New Jersey. Notwithstanding the previous sentence, the Secretary of Commerce shall submit a report to the Appropriations Committees of both houses of Congress by February 1, 1986, evaluating options for restoring or replacing that portion of the Sandy Hook Laboratory destroyed by fire: Provided, That any proposed relocation or replacement of the Laboratory pursuant to said report shall be subject to the reprogramming procedures in section 606 of this Act.] (Department of Commerce Appropriations Act, 1986.)

TITLE VI—GENERAL PROVISIONS

[SEC. 601. No part of any appropriation contained in this Act shall be used for publicity or propaganda purposes not authorized by the Congress.]

SEC. [602] 601. No part of any appropriation contained in this Act shall remain available for obligation beyond the current fiscal year unless expressly so provided herein.

SEC. [603] 602. The expenditure of any appropriation under this Act for any consulting service through procurement contract, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 3109, shall be limited to those contracts where such expenditures are a matter of public record and available for public inspection, except where otherwise provided under existing law, or under existing Executive order issued pursuant to existing law.

SEC. [604] 603. If any provision of this Act or the application of such provision to any person or circumstances shall be held invalid, the remainder of the Act and the application of such provision to persons or circumstances other than those as to which it is held invalid shall not be affected thereby.

[SEC. 605. None of the funds appropriated in titles II and V of this Act may be used for any activity to alter the per se prohibition on resale price maintenance in effect under Federal antitrust laws: Provided, That nothing in this provision shall prohibit any employee of a department or agency for which funds are provided in titles II and V of this Act from presenting testimony on this matter before appropriate committees of the House and Senate: Provided further, That whereas on January 23, 1985, the Department of Justice published a document titled "Vertical Restraints Guidelines", for the stated purpose of explaining Federal policy for enforcing the Sherman Act and the Clayton Act with respect to nonprice vertical restraints of trade;

Whereas such policy guidelines extend beyond the matter of nonprice vertical restraints of trade and propose the avoidance of the per se rule of illegality applied by the Supreme Court in 1911 in Dr. Miles Medical Company against John D. Park and Sons Company (220 U.S. 373) to price-related restraints of trade and subsequently applied by the Supreme Court and endorsed by the Congress on many occasions;

Whereas such policy guidelines are inconsistent with established antitrust law, as reflected in Supreme Court decisions and statements of congressional intent, in maintaining that such policy guidelines do not treat vertical price fixing when, in fact, some provisions of such policy guidelines suggest that certain price fixing conspiracies are legal if such conspiracies are "limited" to restricting intrabrand competition; by blurring the distinction between price and nonprice restraints in analyzing a distribution program containing both types of restraints, thereby qualifying the accepted rule that vertical price fixing in any context is illegal per se; in stating that vertical restraints that have an impact upon prices are subject to the per se rule of illegality only if there is an "explicit agreement as to the specific prices"; in stating that restraints imposed by a manufacturer at the request of dealers are vertical in nature and therefore not subject to the per se rule of illegality; in aggregating the factors of collusion and foreclosure, thereby failing to distinguish adequately between the separate antitrust concerns associated with vertical territorial restraints and with exclusive dealing practices; in stating that less than absolute territorial restraints are "always legal"; and in arbitrarily specifying a 30 per centum minimum market share in the tying product for assessing the legality of tying arrangements;

Whereas such policy guidelines state that the Department of Justice may refuse to attribute to corporations the illegal conduct of their low-level employees acting within the scope of the authority conferred upon such employees by such corporations, contrary to the common law of corporate responsibility and agency in the antitrust context;

Whereas the general business community would be at a risk if it accepted and relied upon such policy guidelines as an accurate statement of existing Federal antitrust laws in the area of vertical restraints of trade;

Whereas such policy guidelines relate to an area in which the Department of Justice has brought no enforcement actions in more than four years and may have been published, in part, as an attempt to influence the courts of the United States to pursue a very narrow and limited vertical restraint analysis in deciding private enforcement antitrust cases;

Whereas previous antitrust enforcement policy guidelines issued by the Department of Justice have been substantially based on existing jurisprudence and congressional intent, and therefore have been given considerable weight by the courts of the United States in evaluating the facts in antitrust litigation; and

Whereas the "Vertical Restraints Guidelines" may affect the development of antitrust law to the detriment of competitive pricing of branded goods and services by direct or mail order retailers: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of the Congress that the antitrust enforcement policy guidelines stated in "Vertical Restraints Guidelines", published by the Department of Justice on January 23, 1985—

(1) are not an accurate expression of the Federal antitrust laws or of congressional intent with regard to the application of such laws to resale price maintenance and other vertical restraints of trade;

(2) shall not be accorded any force of law or be treated by the courts of the United States as binding or persuasive; and

(3) should be recalled by the Attorney General.]

[SEC. 606. (a) None of the funds provided under this Act shall be available for obligation or expenditure through a reprogramming of funds which: (1) creates new programs; (2) eliminates a program, project, or activity; (3) increases funds or personnel by any means for any project or activity for which funds have been denied or restricted; (4) relocates an office or employees; (5) reorganizes offices, programs, or activities; (6) contracts out any functions or activities presently performed by Federal employees; unless the Appropriations Committees of both Houses of Congress are notified fifteen days in advance of such reprogramming of funds.]

[(b) None of the funds provided under this Act shall be available for obligation or expenditure for activities, programs, or projects through a reprogramming of funds in excess of $250,000 or 10 per centum, whichever is less, that: (1) augments existing programs, projects, or activities; (2) reduces by 10 per centum funding for any existing program, project, or activity, or numbers of personnel by 10 per centum as approved by Congress; or (3) results from any general savings from a reduction in personnel which would result in a change in existing programs, activities, or projects as approved by Congress, unless the Appropriations Committees of both Houses of Congress are notified fifteen days in advance of such reprogramming of funds.]

[SEC. 607. None of the funds appropriated by this Act to the Legal Services Corporation may be used by the Corporation or any recipient to participate in any litigation with respect to abortion, except where the life of the mother would be endangered if the fetus were carried to term.] (Department of Commerce, Justice and State, the Judiciary, and Related Agencies Appropriation Act, 1986.)

MILITARY PERSONNEL

ACTIVE FORCES

These appropriations finance the personnel costs of the active duty forces of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force. Changes in financial requirements are primarily related to military personnel strengths. In addition, these appropriations finance the future retirement benefits of the current active forces. While most of the entitlements financed by these appropriations are set by statute, the estimates reflect continuing efforts to improve management including implementation of audit recommendations, improved management of military travel, and prudent use of subsistence, bonus programs, and other pay programs.

The numbers of active duty military personnel provided for are shown in the following table:

RESERVE FORCES

These appropriations finance the personnel costs of the National Guard and Reserve forces, including the future retirement benefits of the current Reserve forces. The estimates reflect continuing efforts to improve management efficiency including, for example, more economical use of training and recruiting resources as well as the undertaking of active missions at lower costs.

The number of National Guard and Reserve personnel estimated to participate in the paid training programs and the number of full-time active duty military personnel provided for are summarized in the following table:

The Reserve Officers' Training Corps program provides training for reserve and regular officer candidates who have enrolled in the course while attending a college at which an ROTC unit has been established. College graduates who satisfactorily complete the advanced course of the program are commissioned and are ordinarily ordered to active duty for a minimum of 3 years.

The Reserve Officers' Training Corps Vitalization Act of 1964, as amended, authorizes a limited number of scholarships for ROTC students on a competitive basis. Successful candidates for the scholarships generally serve a minimum period of 4 years on active duty upon graduation and appointment as a commissioned officer. A number of scholarship recipients will fulfill their entire obligation in the Reserve components.

The Armed Forces health professions scholarship program provides a source of commissioned officers for the various health professions.

The numbers of commissioned officers graduated from these programs are summarized below:

OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE

These appropriations finance the costs of operating and maintaining the Armed Forces, including the Reserve components and related support activities of the Department of Defense, except military personnel costs. Included are amounts for pay of civilians, contract services for maintenance of equipment and facilities, fuel, supplies, and repair parts for weapons and equipment. Financial requirements are influenced by many factors, including the number of aircraft squadrons, Army and Marine Corps divisions, installations, military strength and deployments, rates of operational activity, and quantity and complexity of major equipment (aircraft, ships, missiles, tanks, et cetera) in operation.

RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, TEST, AND EVALUATION

Programs in this title support modernization through military research, exploratory development, fabrication of technology-demonstration devices, and development and testing of prototypes and full-scale preproduction hardware. This work is performed by industrial contractors, Government laboratories and facilities, universities and nonprofit organizations.

Research and development programs are funded to cover annual needs. The following table shows RDT&E funding by activity:

The budget plan for each appropriation is shown as a separate table immediately following the program and financing schedules for those appropriations that are available for obligation for more than one year. In 1987, it presents, by budget activity, the value of the program requested for the life of these multiple-year appropriations, with comparable amounts in 1985 and 1986.

During the development of weapon systems, special management emphasis is placed on achieving savings through increased testing, increased competition, and developing realistic budgets.

The 1987 program provides for increased development efforts on the Small Intercontinental Ballistic Missile and hardened mobile launcher, the Short-Range Attack Missile, the Advanced Tactical Bomber, the MILSTAR Communications Satellite System and the Strategic Defense Initiative as well as an advanced anti-tank weapon, a light helicopter (LHX), an advanced tactical fighter, the next generation airlifter (C-17), and the new nuclear attack submarine. Funds are also requested for product improvement to systems which have already been fielded or are in production, such as TRI-TAC Joint Service Communications, F/A-18, A-6 Upgrade, F-14D, F-15 and the M1E1 Tank. In 1987, a new appropriation is included to finance the Director of Operational Test and Evaluation, Defense to conduct initial operational test and evaluation and joint operational testing and evaluation of weapon systems.

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION

The budget plan for each appropriation is shown as a separate table immediately following the program and financing schedules for those appropriations that are available for obligation for more than one year. In 1987, it presents, by budget activity, the value of the program requested for the life of these multiple-year appropriations, with comparable amounts in 1985 and 1986.

The direct military construction programs for the Armed Forces, both Active and Reserve, shown in the individual schedules of this title are summarized in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION PROGRAM*

	1985 actual	1986 estimate	1987 estimate
Active Forces	4,625,859	4,727,970	5,282,500
Reserve Forces	402,408	370,540	451,200
Interservice activities	419,890	211,998	1,029,100
Total	5,448,157	5,310,508	6,762,800

*The numbers in this table reflect the effects of Public Law 99-177

The 1987 military construction program will support new construction needed to improve living and working conditions, as well as for the introduction of new weapon systems. Weapon systems entering the inventory that require new construction include naval vessels, the Ground Launched Cruise Missile, the Multiple Launch Rocket system, the Trident II Weapon System, and the B-1 bomber. The program continues initiatives to reduce operating costs, increase productivity, and conserve energy by upgrading or replacing facilities which have become functionally obsolete or can be made more efficient through relatively modest investments in improvements.

FAMILY HOUSING, DEFENSE

These appropriations finance all costs associated with construction, improvements, operations, maintenance and leasing of all military family housing. The family housing indebtedness information schedules show the status of indebtedness assumed by each military department to acquire family housing for assignment as public quarters. The program contains initiatives to reduce operating costs and conserve energy by upgrading or replacing facilities which can be made more efficient through relatively modest investments in improvements.

The budget plan for each appropriation is shown as a separate table immediately following the program and financing schedules for those appropriations that are available for obligation for more than one year. In 1987, it presents, by budget activity, the value of the program requested for the life of these multiple-year appropriations, with comparable amounts in 1985 and 1986.

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE STOCK FUNDS

Department of Defense stock funds finance the purchase of materials for resale to the military services and other authorized customers (10 U.S.C. 2208). These inventories are stocked at various Defense activities. Mobilization reserve materials are also purchased through the stock funds.

Budget program.—Inventories rise in 1987 over 1986 for increased non-fuel inventory levels to support an expanding force structure, the modernization of the existing force, and other logistics initiatives. Efforts continue to achieve efficiencies in spare parts procurement through acquisition reform. The following table shows the stock fund inventories (in millions of dollars) resulting from the budget program. Reduced inventory levels in the Navys' 1986 and 1987 programs represent planned decapitalization of assets.

Financing the budget program.—The budget program is financed primarily from sales to customers. Gross expenditures in 1987 are projected to be higher than in 1986 to support an expanding force. Estimated expenditures are shown below (in millions of dollars):

	Gross outlays
	1985 actual	1986 estimate	1987 estimate
Army stock fund	6,656	7,552	8,441
Navy stock fund	7,150	8,612	10,460

Defense stock fund	13,459	12,009	12,827
Total Department of Defense stock funds	38,067	38,678	42,597

Procurement leadtime for material acquisition is greater than the time required to fill and collect customers' orders. As a result, Department of Defense stock funds are authorized to incur obligations in anticipation of future years' sales (10 U.S.C. 2210(b)). Pursuant to this authority, contract authority of $10,464 million was available at the end of 1985, estimated to remain at $10,464 million in 1986 and 1987.

Operating results and financial conditions.—Revenue and expenses for 1986 and 1987 are projected on a break-even basis. It is estimated that by the end of 1987, total assets, less liabilities, will be $49,860 million, including $35,307 million in inventory and other assets capitalized, and a cumulative retained income of $14,553 million.

INDUSTRIAL FUNDS

Department of Defense industrial funds finance various Defense activities that perform industrial or commercial type functions on a reimbursable basis (10 U.S.C. 2208). Workload at these activities is generated by orders from various customers who provide reimbursement through progress payments for the full cost of the work performed. This enables the industrial funds to maintain the level of working capital needed for continued operations.

Budget program.—The policy of stabilizing the rates charged to customers will continue. Estimated total obligations in 1987 are projected to increase by over $1,004 million, reflecting changes in customer workload requirements and price growth. Yearend totals are shown in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

The total program proposed for Operation and Maintenance, General for 1987 is $1,420 million. Under existing law, the $1,420 million will be provided by the Operation and Maintenance, General appropriation, of which $12.5 million will be derived from the Special Recreation Use Fee account.

Legislation is pending to create a Harbor Maintenance Trust Fund. A later transmittal will propose appropriation of $203 million from that trust fund and concurrently request reduction of general fund appropriations by $203 million. This will not change the total program.

Funds are requested for operation, maintenance, and related activities of the Corps of Engineers at 287 navigation projects, 280 flood control projects and 72 multiple purpose projects. Work to be accomplished consists of dredging, repair, and operation of structures and other facilities, including recreation, all as authorized in the various River and Harbor and Flood Control Acts. Related activities include aquatic plant control, monitoring of completed coastal projects, river ice management, maintenance research, general regulatory functions, removal of sunken vessels, and the collection of domestic waterborne commerce statistics. This request also includes funds for Mobilization Readiness Planning as directed in Executive Order 11490.

Under pending legislation that would establish harbor maintenance fees, based on .04 percent of the value of commercial cargo loaded or unloaded at U.S. ports, receipts would be available in a harbor maintenance trust fund to offset part of the cost of maintaining the Nation's ports and harbors. A later transmittal will propose appropriation of $203 million from that trust fund and an equal reduction in general fund appropriations.

Hydraulic mining in California, debris fund.—Fees paid by mine operators in the Sacramento and San Joaquin basins for depositing mine debris in restraining works, are used for their maintenance.

Maintenance and operation of dams and other improvements of navigable waters.—License fees are levied by the Department of Energy for private construction, operation, and maintenance of dams, conduits, and reservoirs. Half of the fees collected are used for maintenance and operation of Federal dams and other navigation structures, and for improvement of navigable waters. License fees are also levied by the Department of Energy for benefits accruing directly as the result of headwater improvements by Federal projects. One hundred percent of these fees collected are used for maintenance and operation of Federal dams and other navigation structures, and for improvement of navigable waters.

Payments to States.—Three-fourths of the money received from lease of Federal lands acquired for flood control, navigation, and allied purposes is paid to the State in which such property is situated for public schools, roads, or other expenses of county government.

The fund provides for the acquisition, operation, and maintenance of plant and equipment used in civil works functions; for temporary financing of services chargeable to civil appropriations; and for furnishing facilities and services for military functions of the Department of the Army, other governmental agencies and private persons (33 U.S.C. 576).

Budget program.—

Operating costs.—Operating costs include plant operations, warehousing, shops and facilities performing common services, and general administrative support including payrolls. Operating costs will increase about 4 percent in 1987.

Capital investment.—The 1987 program contains $13 million for the design, rehabilitation, and construction of structures; $13 million for the design, construction and rehabilitation of dredges, including $10 million in requested new budget authority for construction of a dustpan dredge; $18 million for the design, rehabilitation and construction of floating plant other than dredges; $32 million for the design and procurement of various land based equipment, including $2 million in requested new budget authority for the Corps of Engineers Automation Plan; and $7 million for a variety of relatively small tools, office furniture, and equipment.

Financial condition.—Capital Government equity of the fund amounted to $704.5 million on September 30, 1985. Capital was increased by net earnings of $26.5 million in 1985. Increases are principally due to earnings reserved for plant replacement which are wholly reinvested in assets. In accordance with Public Law 99-88, regarding the design and construction of a Corps of Engineers Learning Facility, $9.5 million was granted to the University of Alabama at Huntsville which subsequently conveyed the grant funds to the Chief of Engineers.

The Inland Waterways Trust Fund was established in accordance with the Inland Waterways Revenue Act of 1978. Under existing law, revenue is derived from receipts from taxes imposed on fuel in vessels in commercial waterway transportation.

Legislation is pending that will, if enacted, provide additional receipts based on increased fuel taxes beginning in 1988. The legislation will also authorize the use of the trust fund for 50 percent of the cost of construction, rehabilitation, modification or post-authorization planning of specified inland waterway projects.
